

Quake Jolts City

VOLCANO ERUPTS

MANILA (AP) — Taal volcano, which killed hundreds of people when it erupted in 1965, began spewing flames and steam today and The Philippines Commission on Volcanology ordered about 1,000 residents to leave their homes on the volcanic island 45 miles south of Manila.

A brief dish-rattling earthquake hit the Victoria area at 6:36 a.m. today, the third major local tremor in 10 months.

It registered about 4.0 on the Richter scale, and awakened thousands, but no damage was reported.

Centre of the quake was in the Strait of Juan de Fuca at Port Townsend, 30 miles east of Port Angeles.

It lasted about five seconds. It began with a slight trembling motion that slowly grew and then shook hard for two seconds before quickly subsiding.

Some residents reported cats and other animals scurried for cover about 15 seconds before the quake began. Dishes rattled and houses shook but no structural damage was reported.

The quake was the third in a series of local corrections, according to Bill Milne, seismologist with the earth physics branch of the federal department of energy, mines and resources.

"It was less severe than the other two. There are a number of corrections behind the main earthquake zone which is in the Pacific Ocean about 275 miles west of Victoria."

Milne said earthquakes are almost a daily occurrence along the quake zone, which runs northwards and is 100 miles west of Port Hardy at the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

The quake zone tremors are seldom felt in Victoria because they are so far out to sea and at least 6,000 feet down.

However, they produce occasional corrections, realignments of the earth, and are felt in Georgia Strait or in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, which was originally thought to be a fault line, but this concept has largely been discarded.

"What we have are corrections behind the quake belt and these corrections are in the waters of the straits."

They seem to occur along the international border between Canada and the U.S. in Georgia Strait. There was a correction in November in Georgia Strait east of the University of B.C. campus. A more severe jolt came May 16 centred on the international boundary near Pender Island.

Today's quakes were centred in American waters just off Port Townsend, a small Washington port on the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Unlike California quakes, local jolts tend to be fairly deep in the earth and therefore the shock is less severe. For example the May tremor was 40 feet below the earth's surface and today's quake is believed to be of about the same depth.

Although it was quite mild, the quake was felt over a wide area. It was strong enough to wake people in coastal areas of Washington state and in a wide section of Vancouver Island, including Sooke, the Malahat area and Sidney.

The tremor was followed by phone calls to anyone in authority as residents reported falling pictures, bouncing TV sets and rattling plates—but no major damage.

A major question was when would the next correction come.

"If I knew the answer to that one I would become a very wealthy man," Milne said.

"More corrections will come but we are not certain when."

South Africa Rioting Spreads to White Area

NEWS BRIEFS

Mediator Named

VANCOUVER (CP) — Safeway Ltd. Wednesday agreed to labor consultant Clive McKee as a mediator in the dispute that closed its wholesale outlets and then shut down its 93 B.C. supermarkets. McKee's intervention was proposed by the locked out Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union.

Hundreds of colored students were reported arriving at Cape Town's railway station to join the protesters, who were rallying to show solidarity with South Africa's blacks.

Police used tear gas after demonstrators smashed a police truck with stones and scaffolding poles from a building site.

Screaming and choking bystanders ran for cover in nearby shops and office buildings.

Traffic in the area came to a halt as the demonstrators marched through the city centre, rocking cars and molesting whites.

Elde rly women were knocked down in a baton charge by police, and pedestrians in Adderley Street, one of Cape Town's main arteries, fled for refuge.

The demonstrators then broke up into several groups. One group marched past the Houses of Parliament and a larger group gathered in Greenmarket Square.

There were no reports of serious injuries.

Earlier, Prime Minister John Vorster rejected U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger's criticism of South Africa's racial policies, saying moral lessons and threats from outsiders will not influence his government.

ON WELFARE? MOVE TO B.C.

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Quebec welfare workers have encouraged welfare recipients in that province to move to British Columbia where social assistance rates are higher. Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Wednesday.

Vander Zalm said he believes that it was common practice until recently to post the difference between B.C. and Quebec social assistance rates in Quebec welfare offices to encourage people to move to B.C.

The basic rate for single-welfare recipients in B.C. is $160 a month. The basic Quebec rate was $150.

Vander Zalm said a department study showed that between 14,000 and 15,000 people arrive in B.C. annually from other parts of Canada and immediately put themselves on welfare.

"There is nothing illegal about the practice and I can't discourage it as social assistance is paid for as much by the federal government as the provinces," Vander Zalm said.

B.C. Jobfinder

Now Needs a Job

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bob McEwan, one of British Columbia's new jobfinders, is out of work.

McEwan, hired by the Human Resources Department, said Wednesday he has quit because the organization is haywire and he lacked the equipment to do a proper job.

He said program co-ordinator Ron Stew promised every week for the six weeks that McEwan was the jobfinder for Haney-Mapple Ridge-Langley welfare recipients that the equipment would come. But it never did.

"Hell, I was bumming paper from the local welfare office," McEwan said.

Stew said the program is off to a slow start because of logistics problems.

STILL UNCONSCIOUS FROM TAHSIS MELEE

A 34-year-old man remains in poor condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today still unconscious from injuries received in a wild melee in Tahsis last weekend.

Makand Mahal was one of two men sent to hospital after the fight which broke out Saturday between two factions of East Indians and involved about 16 persons. Police said he was struck on the head "with something ... we don't know what."

Also sent to hospital was Lamber Sidhu, about 25, who was bashed on his arm with what police believe was a machete. He also was shot in the leg. He is in satisfactory condition in Campbell River District Hospital.

Eight other persons were treated for cuts and bruises in Tahsis following the fight which broke out at 11:30 p.m. in the Riverside Trailer Court and last only minutes.

Cpl. Vern Baugh said today he still has no idea what triggered the incident but said a feed had been building between "two small groups of hotheads" for several weeks.

He said he has received various explanations from the small 36-family East Indian community. But no one wants to talk about it, he said.

"They are deeply upset and disturbed by what happened. Most of the East Indian people here are honest and hard-working. They're really upset over getting a bad name."

Baugh said he charges "everything I possibly can."

"If I don't do something there could be more trouble."

He described the situation now as stable.

Mackay said the various increased charges should bring in an estimated $200,000 annually.

Ferry Study

He said the ELUC report merely "assumed" a 50 per cent increase.

The report was not released, Davis said, because it was only a preliminary draft.

However, a covering letter presented with the report, written by project manager D. H. C. Kettle, said: "I am pleased to submit herewith the final report of the B.C. Ferries Study."

Davis insisted the final draft of the report is yet to come and said he expected to meet with Environment Minister Jim Nielsen next week to discuss it.

Meanwhile, Davis indicated Wednesday he is in favor of a ferry fare structure based on the length of vehicles using the ferries.

Davis said he was prepared to make that recommendation when cabinet was considering the ferry fare increases earlier this year, but was told by his staff that there was as yet no efficient method of measuring cars.

"We are still trying to find such a device," the transport minister said.

After the new B.C. Ferry Corporation is established, probably in about six weeks, any fare change based on length would be up to the corporation, he said.

"I hope some new equipment can be found by the corporation," he said.

Asked whether a new structure based on higher rates for larger cars would be instituted if a device were found, Davis said: "I certainly hope so," but indicated no such move would come before the end of the year.

Tuning Out the CRTC

The Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission has had our support on a number of occasions in its attempts to foster Canadian culture and content in the country's broadcast system. But banning FM radio broadcasts originating in the United States from Lower Mainland cable services is tantamount to fascism. Cable companies were not consulted, customers were not informed, in fact there was no public hearing of any kind. Just the arbitrary announcement to remove the U.S. stations. Even more incredible, the CRTC ordered the removal of Victoria FM station CFMS from Lower Mainland cable services on the grounds it was a "distant station."

The rationale behind the CRTC decision is bizarre. It seems this bureaucratic push-me-pull-you insists on more "foreground programming" among Canadian FM stations. Translated, that means more chatter and less music. When FM stations complained that such a rule would result in listeners tuning in U.S. FM stations, the CRTC appears to have decided to eliminate the competition. Never back down from any decision, no matter how ridiculous, seems to be the CRTC's motto.

Sound and Fury

As government and labor gear up for the Canadian Labor Congress Oct. 14 one-day general strike, the rhetoric from both sides takes on a surreal aspect. There's Labor Minister John Munro one moment admonishing workers they may be fired if they take the day off, yet in the next breath constrained to say that the protest is a legitimate exercise in dissent.

On the other side British Columbia Federation of Labor president George Johnston says union leadership has had difficulty in trying to maintain restraint among the membership. Even some business leaders are quoted as saying they wish they could help labor in its protest about these dastardly controls.

What we are seeing is an elaborate dramatic production, not unlike the mating rites of partridges where male birds puff themselves up and beat their wings against the ground. The federal government is naturally worried about the effect of the protest while at the same time it must condemn dissent.

As for the nation's labor leaders, they like to give the impression that every trade unionist in the country is gnashing teeth and ready for the barricades. Nothing could be further from the truth. The most vocal opposition to controls is coming from union leaders and prominent business figures, the latter who are finally feeling the effects of a program that suited them fine when it was affecting only labor.

Among Canada's 10 million workers perhaps as many as two million will strike on Oct. 14. Both government and labor will immediately claim the results prove total victory for their side. Such are the machinations of Canadian politics in 1976. Everyone will go back to work and the controls will remain until sometime in 1977. That's what is so ridiculous about the whole exercise. It is a charade, a matter of drum-beating and teeth-baring. "A tale full of sound and fury signifying nothing," as Shakespeare wrote.

Welcome to Costa Rica

The U.S. consulate in Vancouver has just added an officer of the United States Information Service to give us Canadians in the west the American viewpoint on major issues of controversy between the two countries — such as oil and natural gas exports and transportation policies.

"It was felt a more direct personal contact was needed with western Canada on issues which affect both our countries," said the new man, Eddie Deerfield, a former Chicago newspaperman.

His appointment comes none too soon. Except for the odd press release or two, the Americans don't seem to try too hard to get their side across. Compared with the South Africans and South Koreans who flood newspaper offices with expensively-produced propaganda (admittedly, they have to try harder), the United tates doesn't even attempt to influence opinion.

In one way, we should take Deerfield's appointment as a compliment. Until now, USIS hasn't had a person west of Toronto. It's a belated recognition that the natives are restless out there on the plains and among the rocks and trees. We've come of age if we can demand the full-time services of a USIS man, just like Costa Rica or Kenya.

French Fact

In his letter of Aug. 27, Brad Addison writes of "a bilingual federal civil service as a just, equitable service beneficial to all Canadians." Those familiar with the ability of politicians and bureaucrats to speak and write gobbledegook can perhaps be forgiven if they are wary of the promotion of bilingualism throughout Canada at a cost of millions of dollars.

Does Mr. Addison actually believe that Pierre Trudeau and company are so lacking in intelligence that they have not ever been aware of the futility of this exercise? Can anyone believe the prime minister was surprised at the facts documented in the Bibeau report? It is suggested that upon graduation, Mr. Addison obtain employment in the federal civil service. The education gained may be helpful to him.

For years the French language has been taught in schools west of Quebec. Perhaps Mr. Addison might, as an additional project, make an in-depth study of the usefulness of those lessons, excepting in the case of a small minority gifted in linguistics.

Another problem in regard to the teaching of French in the schools is the fact that the male is generally less able to learn the language than the female, according to a graduate of the Sorbonne who taught French for 35 years in Westchester County, New York. Do those clever fellows in Ottawa and elsewhere propose to staff their offices with bright young women whose mother tongue is other than French and risk offending their wives and the ego of their male francophone and anglophone assistants?

It is interesting to note that the word "male" is of the masculine gender and the word "fool" of the feminine gender in le français. Will this Anglophone of partial French origin be considered a bigot if the plain old English word is preferred to the French — une bête? — Canadian.

The main point is why the proliferation of condominiums, and luxury condominiums at that? It seems Victoria at the moment is hardly short of luxury accommodation. Expensive condominiums remain vacant while Victoria suffers a shortage of rooming houses and even rental apartments are only just sufficient.

I expect the city does get more in the way of taxes from condominiums and the developer does get an decent return on his investment even if units stay empty for a long period of time. However a city, one would have thought, should run mainly for the benefit of citizens of all economic levels.

Victoria is not just the home for wealthy retirees. It is a university town with thousands of undergraduates, teachers, junior professors, etc. It is home to some less than wealthy retirees. Where can they go?

Until Laurel Point is filled, is there any pressing need for more condominiums particularly luxury ones? The city should explain the demolition permit issued on May 3. — Monica Oldham, 511 Victoria Avenue.

Posh, genteel Hampton Court apartments — slated for demolition

Hampton Court

The demise of Hampton Court brings up some interesting points, the obvious being if it doesn't qualify as a heritage house what does? Like Bill 42 does, heritage designation only works if it happens to be convenient for the developers.

It seems the tenants only heard of the desk clerk's indifference astonishing. We had dirty clothing; our belongings smelled of smoke; and there had been no hot water with which to clean ourselves. When we later realized we had also been overcharged, we expressed displeasure to Mr. Ken Evans of the hotel. To his credit, he made a real effort to restore good will.

In view of the two hotel fires, remarks quoted in the newspapers, and our own experience, I'd make these suggestions:

- Escape facilities of the hotels should be carefully evaluated for their adequacy in providing for the exit of patrons.
- Hotel staff should receive some training in emergency procedure.
- Those concerned with lagging tourism should explore means to effect more positive attitudes in service staff. — Charles A. Hovey, Oakland, Calif.

Ruthless Robbery

Acts of robbery always rate a report in the press, so now that the veterans have been "robbed" of their rights at their veterans' hospital it all reads as news. The veterans want it back but unfortunately throughout Canada they do not speak with one voice. The oldest veterans organization in the Dominion is the Army, Navy and Air Force of which I was proud to be asked to be founder president of 302. That powerful body, the Royal Canadian Legion, began after the First World War, claims the most members and welcomes all veterans through its doors.

A veteran's heart swells with pride as he walks into any unit with Kipling's rousing ditties ringing in his ears. A welcome, especially around Armistice Day, New Year's, bingo et al.

Over a quarter century ago we old sweats got together and agreed that good united leadership, speaking for all veterans, in a united voice could put any Government in or out. But Mr. Trudeau was "divide and conquer." He doesn't want to hear a united veterans' voice thinking throughout the land. Those of us who are still here, nursing our war wounds, will continue taking our eight pills a day to keep alive and will away the passing hours awaiting the inevitable. With Shakespeare we know the "good is often interred with their bones" and as we pass into oblivion we will leave behind the manoeuvring political parties, both federal and provincial, who will choose their champions such as Dr. Scott Wallace, to support their nefarious schemes.

No matter how you slice it, the taking away of the Veterans Hospital was ruthless unadulterated robbery. — Clarence Goode, Squadron Leader Royal Air Force (Retd.), 1840 St. Ann Street.

An amazing phenomenon takes place when a successful candidate is elected to parliament — by virtue of a few thousand votes he or she immediately becomes an expert on every subject under the sun, on the incidence of syphilis in Patagonia to the nocturnal habits of the Basho-Bazouks in the Urals.

In no instance is this more exemplified than in transport minister Jack Davis. Without any recorded exposure to, training in or experience with transport, economics, finance or mathematics, he has suddenly become the highest authority on these subjects in B.C. from whose say-so there is no appeal.

Perhaps Mr. Davis would bring his arithmetical genius to bear on this one and sort it out.

On Monday, Aug. 23 I, being of "golden age" travelled free on the ferry from Swartz Bay to Tsawwassen. On the ferry I bought a bus ticket to Vancouver, cost $1.30.

Coming back I went to the bus depot in Vancouver, got a ticket which allowed me to transport to the ferry terminal at Tsawwassen, same journey — opposite way — fare now $3.98.

Requests to the publicly paid official who issued me the ticket for an explanation of the difference resulted only in insolence and a refusal to give any information on the subject, even to the whereabouts of a higher official who might be better mannered.

Perhaps Mr. Davis will devote his mathematical genius to solving a simple problem — why A to B is $1.30 and B to A is $3.98. Now Mr. Davis, no polemics, no side issues, no herring of any color — just simple arithmetic and a simple answer to a simple question.

Just in case there is any doubt of the accuracy of my statement, I have the duplicate of the ticket issued to me. Also, if Mr. Davis is interested in questioning the ticket issuer, I also have his name despite his reluctance to give it to me. — Kevin Cahill, 809 Lawndale Avenue.

Gov't Wheels Grind Again

Ottawa — Citizens awake. During the next three weeks, at a time when your own ambitions will be no bolder than to ride yourselves of children, summer cottage and the chore of watering the lawn, your future, or at least some important parts of it, will be decided at a series of secret conferences, first of the mandarins and then of the cabinet ministers.

The results of this same process a year ago can only be described, even with kindness, as mixed. Finance Minister John Turner quit the cabinet, leaving behind him a wide credibility gap. To plug the hole, the government rushed into a wage and price controls program which, although reasonably successful in itself, has provoked organized labor to a fury, even if it is a quite fraudulent gauntlet, and has reduced the business community, with somewhat better cause, to apoplexy.

Still, nothing ventured nothing gained. If you are, like the Liberal government, 15 percentage points behind in the Gallup poll, there is much to be gained.

To the Barracks

This week the first step will be taken along the critical path that leads toward the mid-October opening of parliament when the government will make public its legislative program for the next year. For three days the top officials of the finance department, chaired by Finance Minister Donald Macdonald, will go into their annual retreat to figure out where they want the economy to go and how they can help to get it there.

In keeping with today's approved hairshirt style of restraint, this meeting of finance officials will be held at an army barracks in Kemptville just outside Ottawa. Last year's assembly, with Turner in command, was staged at a luxury hotel in the Laurentian resort village of St. Donat-de-Valois.

The ideas generated at these whether-the-economy sessions can be of critical importance. The principal product of last year's finance department meeting, for example, was an assessment of Canada's long-range economic prospects that was gloomy enough to snap the cabinet out of its dreams for new social programs and into wage and price controls.

Next up will be the "DMS-10" group of

Too Many Newsmen Clutter View

The thing I worry about is the press. The arrogant, lovable, cheeky, oblivious, harum-scarum press. They are breeding too fast. They are dividing and multiplying, like paramecia. They are beginning to dominate the events they are meant unobtrusively to cover. When the bit players begin to outnumber the participants, you know something has gone seriously wrong.

The apogee of the art came at the Montreal Olympics when it was discovered there were 7,886 members of the trade present to cover 6,934 athletes. At the same time, in Madison Square Garden in New York, the 5,000 delegates and alternates to the Jimmy Carter love-in were outnumbered by 5,500 media types milling about in search of a new angle on Amy's lemonade stand. That may indeed be true journalistic democracy — a reporter going one-on-one against every delegate with a few left over to sleep off their hangovers — but one wonders if a bit more of the manpower and expense accounts might not be spent more fruitfully in Soweto or Beloit where the protective coloring of the group-think is not so available.

The fact of the matter is that any large gathering these days, be it smoke-filled or sweat-stained, is a media event. Conventions are as much a gathering of the clan among journalists, who haven't seen each other for a year and have a need to exchange gossip, as they are among legitimate conventioneers. It becomes the celebration of one's self; the press itself more a participant than an observer, sucked into the process and often dominating it.

The major problem in all this, of course, is that bastard stepchild of the pencil press — the electronic babbler of TV and radio. The paraphernalia of TV — both human and mechanical — is such that it takes half an acre to accommodate the foot soldiers, stragglers, handmaids and spaghetti entrails sufficient to put one cliche-encrusted commentator into your living room. The total creative output per body would not threaten a dachshund, but the carcasses clutter the view.

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

The point that those of us who practise the "black art" tend to ignore is that the public is getting exasperated with the mob scene that merely obscures their view and adds little to their perception. Both at the Tory leadership convention in Ottawa and the Carter-Benedicton in New York (both events designed in fact for TV coverage), any mere delegates who ventured onto the convention floor were given the clear impression that they were the intruders, violators on territory reserved for the real masters of the arena — the TV puppets and their entourage. Perfectly understandable was the visceral roar of resentment that rose from Tory delegates high in the pews when any of the principals — Robert Stanfield in affectionate fashion, John Diefenbaker in blustering fashion, Pat Nowlan or Paul Hellyer in bitter fashion — threw a verbal spear at the dreadful press. The media types, who are incestuous in their self-obsession, seemed stunned by the vitriol raining down from the balconies. It was no surprise to anyone watching the resentment build up over the past few years when we, answerable to no one in the public's eyes, began to dominate the events we were supposed to be shyly covering. The fact that the shallow charlatan Spiro Agnew was unfrocked tends to obscure the eager response he got from the public when he launched his attacks on the elitist media that — in the general mind — puts itself a notch above the unwashed it is purportedly interpreting.

When does the worm start to turn? The turn, it is suggested, has already started. The first chipping at the feet of clay was done in the sympathetic way, but it was nonetheless rather devastating. It was the book, The Boys On The Bus, done by young American reporter Timothy Crouse, a day-by-day-chronicle of how the working press covered the 1972 Presidential campaign.

For the first time, the public got a readable, understandable explanation of how news decisions are made, of how pack journalism works, of how the boys waited to see how the Associated Press played his lead, which ones drank, which ones were lazy, how the photographers always got the stewardess and other esoteric details they never taught you in journalism school. As a piece of honest reporting, it is far closer to real life than the Woodstein epic, All The President's Men.

The deluge, one suggests, one suspects, is yet to come. All the institutions have come under attack in recent years — the church, medicine, government, the law, universities. The press is ripe for a Ralph Nader type to launch a well-mounted attack.

A decade ago Dr. John Porter, in his classic The Vertical Mosaic, laid down an indictment that unfortunately still applies: "There is, of course, nothing professional about the role of newspaper reporting. As a group, reporters have no disciplined academic training in any particular sphere, although they seem prepared to write about almost anything. They do not as an occupational group license themselves, govern their own affairs or establish their own norms of performance. As Bernard Shaw said long ago, 'They have no public register.'"

The major sinners in much of this, it must be admitted, are the Japanese. They were so unwise as to perfect lightweight portable tape recorders, thus loosing upon the corridors of Ottawa, as a prime example, a clutch of electronic jockeys who have as much relationship to basic journalism as barbershop has to surgery. The Ottawa Press Gallery (while excluding the man from Peking) now contains 170 members, a substantial jump whom would be rendered sterile if Duracell batteries were ever banned from the land. Their persistence in pursuit of the ultimate God known as the 30-second clip has resulted in a remarkable fact: public sympathy on the side of the unpopular Mr. Trudeau when in desperation he indulged in a semi-punch-up with one of the jockeys in the daily scrum that so demeans the parliamentary process.

The excessive numbers of scribes wouldn't be bad in itself if it bred diversity of opinion. It doesn't. It merely encourages monolithic thinking, group conclusions, herd clichés. It is journalism by press conference. Is the public really getting any more information out of 4,000 pseudo-reporters than it did from 400? We offend by our numbers. When we don't provide the insights, but merely obstruct the view, the public impatience grows.

Feather Cookies, Manure-Fed Beef

Not unlike the alchemists who tried to coax gold out of lead, contemporary scientists attempting to make food from garbage have met with scoffing.

However, as more and more effluent-based foodstuffs flow from laboratories around the country, it is becoming clear that one problem — the "garbage explosion" — may be part of the solution of another — food shortages.

Bread from Whey

Fish and shellfish are being raised on coal-slurry waste water from power plants, prime rib and chicken are being produced from feed composed partly of sewage, and crops are being grown in fields irrigated with sanitized water flushed from toilets. Bread has been fortified with protein-rich whey, heretofore a wasted by-product of cheese making, and cookies have been made with flour that is more than 90 per cent protein and made of chicken feathers.

At the University of Georgia, these "chicken feather cookies" have been taste-tested by a panel of 15 people, only one of whom thought they could tell them from regular cookies.

Two per cent of the flour in the cookies has been replaced by a feather distillate that is mostly pure protein.

Dr. A. L. Shewelt, head of the university's food science department, believes that, if "masking agents" such as raisins and nuts were included in the cookies, the feather powder could replace even more than 10 per cent of the flour.

Like wheat flour, feather powder is not a complete protein; it is short on lysine, one of the eight amino acids the body can't make itself. Experiments indicate that the lysine content may be increased by applying heat to the feather powder, Shewelt said, although more research is needed to determine the amount of heat required.

In another sector of the scientific front, manure is being used as a basis of feed for cattle and other livestock. This program frees grain for human consumption, lowers feeding costs and makes use of a product that now simply accumulates in feedlots as smelly, polluting and often disease-promoting waste.

So prepare for beef without a side order of guilt. All you must do is recognize that a steak from a manure-fed steer is just as tasty and nutritious as any other beef. What cattle eat — grain, manure or a combination — affects the taste little.

The Algae Chain

Coal-fired power plants produce much more than electricity. The coal burned also leaves heat, sulfur dioxide, ash and other things algae require for growth. Coal plants also use lots of water, and algae grow in water.

A University of Washington professor and a graduate student have proposed using the plant wastes to cultivate algae as animal feed and eventually food for human beings.

Frieda B. Taub, professor of food science and technology, and James R. Fox, graduate student in forestry, suggest in a paper that organically rich coal slurry could be used to grow yeast (a single-cell protein) or algae which could be made into feed for livestock, fish and shellfish. Coal-plant wastes also could be used as fertilizer if the coal were washed carefully for toxic material.

A coal-burning power plant that consumes 21,000 tons of coal a day (the model used for the study is a plant in Centralia, Wash.) also produces 600 to 700 tons a day of sludge, the organic slurry, in addition to electricity. At present, the sludge is a pollutant. The plant also turns out several tons of carbon dioxide, nitrous oxides and sulfur oxides (including dioxide) each day.

All these gases, now regarded as pollutants and targets of expensive cleansing mechanisms, could be used along with the organic slurry and waste heat to provide the algae cultures, according to Taub and Fox.

They write that the required technology has been available for at least 30 years. During that time, the cost of production for the algae was close to that of soybeans, which are the conventional base of many animal feeds and, like algae, are about 40 per cent protein.

As long as United States farmers could produce as many soybeans as they could sell, economics prevented the creation of "waste management parks" in which coal plants and farms would operate in symbiosis. Now, however, increasing demand for soybeans, rising food prices, pollution controls and growing reliance on coal may make the concept workable.

Through several years of frustration and gales of laughter, Seckler tried to develop the proper process for turning manure into gold.

In 1973 Bill Gaynor, an associate, developed a machine that separates the manure into a roughage feed and a protein supplement (plus fertilizer and a fuel as by-products). That year, as many other cattle raisers were forced out of business by rising prices, Seckler's Ceres Ecology Corp. put its first herds on manure-based feed. The laughter began to subside.

Today, with 10,000 head deriving 15 to 20 per cent of their diet from waste, the study is a plant in Centralia, Wash., also added to many baked products, and other processed foods to increase protein.

* Culturing algae and yeast on municipal waste, forest wastes (cellulose) and petroleum feedstock. As early as the First World War, Germans combated wartime feed shortages by cultivating algae on wood wastes.

* Using municipal sewage as a combination fertilizer and irrigator. This has been done in sugar cane fields in Hawaii. Like the coal wastes, the sewage must be sterilized and monitored closely for toxicity.

Harrumph! No more beer in the barber's chair, says the liquor administration branch, Killjoys. Our initial reaction was surprise that such a refreshingly civilized thing could happen at all in our staid young city. After all, what is so immoral about sipping a cool brew while undergoing a tonsorial tuneup?

— but does anyone suffer as a result of it?

But beyond that basic simple issue is a much larger question. Such petty enforcement of a silly regulation is just one more example illustrating the need to houseclean our statute books (in this case, those of B.C.) and in particular bring puritanical, outmoded liquor pseudo-laws into tune with social attitudes. Health, economics, labor — the weighty subjects with which legislators must wrangle — obviously demand the lion's share of government's attention.

Government would have more time for these matters if it spent less time working itself into a lather over little things, such as liquor regulations, that serve more to annoy than anything else.

The attention governments do pay to these little things should be in the form of deregulation. The state has no particular business in the barber shops of the nation.

Some Things Never Change

By JUDITH MARTIN
The Washington Post

In an article which asks the question "Is there sex after Harvard?" the Harvard Independent, a student newspaper, indicates that there certainly isn't much during.

A Radcliffe senior is quoted as moaning that, "I've learned that men here often mistake friendliness for a sexual invitation. I'm careful not to flirt with anyone, and I'll rarely risk going to visit a guy I know from the dining hall."

A Harvard senior whines, "If you invite a woman out a few times and she goes but never calls you, what does that mean?"

Another Radcliffe senior sighs that co-educational living quarters are "relaxed to the point where nobody went out at all." The upshot was that I had no sexual or emotional ties at all."

Another Harvard senior complains that "Harvard's a difficult place to gain such experience (with women). The lack of defined dating forms has unquestionably made things harder for someone like me."

And so on. "You become defensive and try to turn off your emotions." "There are always people around here, so many casual friends, that you don't really need to make any deep relationships." "There is little interpersonal contact, because too many people feel they'd rather be safe than sorry." "It's difficult to have male acquaintances who are more than dining hall companions. If I dropped in to see a male friend whom I knew from the dining hall I'm afraid he would assume I was trying to pick him up."

Now, where have you heard this sort of drivel before? At college, right? At your very own coffee shop or other dateless Saturday night refuge, back in the old upright '50s or worse.

What does it mean, pouring out of the privileged little mouths of mid '70s undergraduates? Brace yourself, this is more horrifying than anything any middled-aged parent could have dreamed of.

It means that two decades of struggle have gone for nothing. Somebody had to invent the pill, it had to be marketed, generations of students had to agitate to have it distributed at college dispensaries; age-old parietal laws had to be fought and conquered; even older sexual and social customs had to be discussed to death before they could be buried; and living patterns, many of them with their own substantial endowments from alumni, had to be done away with, before those children could enjoy the healthy freedoms hardly imagined by their elders.

And now they're telling us they can't get any action?

That seems to be the complaint. They can't meet anybody to date, because they're all living together in such a friendly, brother-and-sister way. They can't spend comfortable evenings together anyway, because there is no established dating pattern, such as dinner-movie drink-kiss. They can't fall in love because they don't want to get involved, and can't get any because — what was it they said?

To a rule-paralyzed adult, this is very scary. Here we all were happy and secure in the thought that all those kids were having all that fun, and what were they really up to behind our backs?

For one thing, one Harvard senior swears, they are "not going all the way." For another, they are taking advantage of the living arrangements to spend the night with their whatever-you-call-them, without "really doing anything." Some have even been known to say that they are "saving themselves."

And that's not the worst, either. As the Harvard Independent article explains, "Individuals will worry for hours over their relationships here, tease out old memories, shake them and hold them to the light to see where things went wrong. They wonder why people who are so very articulate in the classroom are so afraid to speak to each other about personal feelings. Women ask whether they can be a feminist without putting off men, or whether they should be interested in men who dislike their politics. People try to affix blame for relationships that failed. Seniors about to graduate think ruefully of the people they might have liked to know better and wonder why they never found the courage to be a bit forward. And finally, people wonder how much being at Harvard has affected the nature of their social lives."

"My God, that's what we were doing. And we could do it and still all get back in our own rooms by curfew time."

Mill Kayoed For Week By Outage

KAMLOOPS (CP) — It could be a week before Weyerhaeuser Canada Ltd.'s operations are back to normal following a power outage at the mill Tuesday.

Weyerhaeuser communications director Bob Egby said power at the mill went out about 5:30 a.m. Tuesday and was not restored until 7:30 p.m.

"It just went down, just like that," said Egby.

"It's a rough thing to have a power failure when you have $180 million worth of equipment standing still."

He said the problem is in one of the two power lines that run from Weyerhaeuser's transformer to the mill.

Operations should resume sometime today once a massive cleanup job is completed, he said. It could be a week before the power line is repaired.

The company estimated it lost about 1,000 tons in pulp production during the shutdown.

Work crews remained on the job throughout the outage.

Grizzly Plea To McCarthy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jim Wright of Telkwa says he will take his case for saving the grizzly bear population in the Skeena area before recreation Minister Grace McCarthy later this week.

He said he and four other northern B.C. residents each want to buy the $35 grizzly tags issued by the fish and wildlife branch in order to ensure that at least five grizzlies are saved from hunters' bullets. The five would do no hunting after getting the tags.

They made their application to officials at Smithers last week but Wright said they were informed they first must pass an examination on conservation and outdoor recreation and then buy a hunting license.

"To keep a bear alive in this province today you have to know how to kill," said Wright, a non-hunter. "And, would you believe it, that exam includes a gun-handling course?"

"Have you ever heard of anything so ridiculous? I don't think fish and wildlife branch policies in B.C. are any different from those in the U.S. and we lost the wildlife battle down there."

Wright said his group is using the grizzlies "to get a foot in the door—the government can't keep using the economic imperative as a reason to kill animals."

Gov't 'Immoral' On Farm Costs

A spokesman for the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture Thursday charged that the provincial government is being immoral in its attitude toward farmers.

Pat Hibbert, acting vice-president of the federation, said the government agrees farmers are in trouble due to higher costs but is making no move to help them out through the farm Income Assurance Plan.

"To all intents and purposes it is immoral to concede that there is a problem and still do nothing about it," he said.

Hibbert of Enderby, made the comments in an interview from Richmond where the federation's bargaining committee met Tuesday to discuss the problem of general rates for the various insurance plans.

The rates cover such things as labor costs, return on time, and determine the amount of money the farmers would get from the insurance programs.

The government has asked the farmers in all 10 community groups covered by plans to accept a one-year waiting period on the rates retroactive to Jan. 1, 1979.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A receiver-manager has been appointed in an attempt to salvage a financially-troubled Indian co-operative logging project near Zeballos on the northwest coast of Vancouver Island.

The appointment was made by the Bank of Montreal on the recommendation of Woods, Gordon and Co., a Vancouver management consultant firm whose financial review of the Ehatesah Cooperative Enterprise Association project last April revealed current liabilities of $4.9 million and assets of $547,000.

The study, commissioned by the federal Department of Regional Economic Expansion (DREE), also showed that the co-operative was losing $118,000 a month on a cash basis.

The project was to be owned and managed by members of the Ehatesah Indian band, a tribe within the Nootka nation, through the co-operative.

The co-operative received substantial federal funding from DREE in the form of a $2.5 million grant under ARDA, the Agricultural Rehabilitation Development Act. Only $1.8 million has been paid to the co-op; the remainder was to be paid after the co-op had been operating for a couple of years.

Other funding came in a $2.4 million loan from the Bank of Montreal — 75 per cent of which was guaranteed by the Indian economic development fund — and a $500,000 loan from the Department of Indian Affairs.

The co-operative's financial problems are surfacing now because several logging equipment suppliers, who are owed $1.2 million by the co-op, are in financial difficulty, too, and are anxious to receive payment.

"It looked very viable and of both economic and social benefit to the co-operative," said Dr. Bill Hanneson, acting director-general of the B.C. division of DREE. "We all find it shocking that it has gone under and into receivership."

Unfortunately, these conditions were not always met, resulting in over-expenditures and ensuing debt."

Hanneson said it will take some time to determine what went wrong but there was a series of occurrences that contributed to the current problem.

The timber market changed and there were terrain and climatic conditions, like a severe storm that hampered road development at a crucial time, that added to normal start-up problems."

Other problems cited in the Woods, Gordon study included purchase of equipment before it was needed; equipment breakdowns due to inexperienced operators, and the timber was of lower quality than originally forecast.

Guy said the UFW won a representation vote and was certified last December but the company has refused to negotiate. The union began a strike Tuesday at West Foods.

BOYCOTT DOLE FRUIT, B.C. URGED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Farmers of B.C. (UFB) dispute with West Foods, Inc. of Ventura, Calif., was brought to the British Columbia consumer Wednesday when Len Guy, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, called for a boycott of Dole products.

The parent company of West Foods, Gordon study included purchase of equipment before it was needed; equipment breakdowns due to inexperienced operators, and the timber was of lower quality than originally forecast.

Guy said the UFW won a representation vote and was certified last December but the company has refused to negotiate. The union began a strike Tuesday at West Foods.

Getting a Charge Out of Sex

VANCOUVER (CP) — A county court judge was told Wednesday that customers of the Penthouse Cabaret could use credit cards to pay for sex with prostitutes who gathered at the downtown night spot.

Crown prosecutor Roy Jaques told Judge William Trainor that between 80 and 100 prostitutes were at the club, most nights, and that they paid fees to use it as their headquarters.

Jacques told the court he will call as witnesses two prostitutes and a policewoman who posed as a prostitute. He said they will testify that the defendants were honoring credit cards for sex payment.

He said there were four credit card deals with undercover policemen who posed as clients short of cash to pay prostitutes.

TEENAGE SMOKING INCREASES IN U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — Cigarette smoking among American teenagers has been rising for the past six years with no levelling off in sight, Robert Wallace of the U.S. National Interagency Council of Smoking and Health said Wednesday.

He told delegates at an international health education conference here that campaigns which emphasize the health hazards of smoking are futile and another approach is needed.

"Sixteen per cent of the kids between 12 and 18 in the U.S. smoke, and they're all aware of the danger they face."

"We're looking for alternative programs because if we don't stem the growing tide of teenage smokers we're going to see a generation go up in smoke—dying from cancer, heart disease and lung problems."

OTTAWA (CP) — A change in lifestyle — a better diet, more exercise, reduced smoking and drinking — will do more for the health of most North Americans than medical care, an expert told an international health care conference Wednesday.

Exercise Cold Fire, a combined land-air training operation through NATO's central region in Europe will be held Sept. 6-10, and Exercise Team Work '76, a large-scale maritime exercise, will be conducted Sept. 10-23, the defence department announced Wednesday.

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal department of consumer affairs says the campaign is "pretty close to the line" of misleading advertising.

And a spokesman for the federal department of consumer affairs says the campaign is "pretty close to the line" of misleading advertising.

Quarter-page ads appeared last week in newspapers across the country with high lettering promoting "no-charge chequing" and a line saying "It pays to become a TD customer."

Radio spots are also under way and the program will be plugged on television during the Canada Cup hockey series.

The newspaper ads go on to explain that in order to eliminate the usual 16-cent charge for each cheque written on a personal chequing account, a $200 minimum monthly balance must be maintained.

What the ads don't say is that personal chequing accounts do not pay any interest and if this same $200 were placed in a Toronto Dominion premium savings account, which pays eight per cent interest, the money would earn $16 annually.

At 16 cents a cheque, a customer would have to write 100 cheques a year, or just more than eight a month, in order to benefit from the "no-charge chequing."

If the minimum monthly balance dips below $200, the customer will be charged 16 cents for each cheque written during the statement period.

The program is thus, more accurately described as a reduced-charge chequing program for those who write more than eight cheques a month.

John Bowles, co-ordinator of public relations for Toronto Dominion, said there was no conscious attempt on the part of the bank to mislead the public.

Young Lawyers Rush for Jobs

WINNIPEG (CP) — More than half the Canadian Bar Association's 18,500 members have been in practice for less than 10 years and the scramble for jobs is increasing.

Young lawyers are experiencing the problem that teachers, nurses, engineers and other specialists have had in the 1970s: getting jobs.

Association president Boyd Ferris, who took office today as the 1976 convention came to a close, alluded to the problem Wednesday in a speech to what the association calls "young lawyers," those in practices for less than 10 years.

He noted that a survey is under way to find out how many lawyers practice where,

Busy Month For NATO

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's NATO forces are gearing up for a busy month of September with at least two major exercises planned.

Exercise Cold Fire, a combined land-air training operation through NATO's central region in Europe will be held Sept. 6-10, and Exercise Team Work '76, a large-scale maritime exercise, will be conducted Sept. 10-23, the defence department announced Wednesday.

Hidden Snag in Bank Campaign

OTTAWA (CP) — The Toronto Dominion Bank has embarked on a half-million-dollar advertising campaign to promote a "no-charge chequing" program, which isn't exactly what the name implies.

1964 Nuclear Blast Poisoning Bared

RICHLAND, Wash. (WP) — U.S. federal officials said Wednesday that "a number of individuals" were seriously contaminated in 1964 by an explosion at a plutonium recovery facility at the Hanford Nuclear Reservation near here, where an explosion Monday contaminated eight persons.

Officials of both the Energy Research and Development Administration and the Atlantic Richfield Hanford Co., which operates part of the nuclear facility for ERDA, have denied since Monday's incident that there have been any other serious accidents involving radioactive materials on the reservation.

But other federal officials said Wednesday that in addition to the 1964 explosion, radiation hazards forced the evacuation on several occasions of workers at the reprocessing plant where Monday's blast occurred.

These federal officials said that in the 1964 blast, none of the victims were killed and none were as seriously contaminated as two of those affected Monday. The 1964 explosion took place at a plant operated by the General Electric Co. No other details of that explosion could be learned.

All but two of the workers contaminated in Monday's explosion have been decontaminated and released. But medical officials said Wednesday that at least one of the remaining two workers shows signs of extremely high levels of radiation poisoning, externally and internally.

A doctor said he is worried about the possibility that the workers might develop a malignant condition of the bone.

Pipe Weld Waiver Sought

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Trans-Alaska pipeline builders have asked the federal government to waive its own quality ruled for 612 of the 56,000 main girth welds so far installed on the massive project.

All the welds included in the exemption request are buried in sensitive environmental areas such as permafrost, river flood plains or under the rivers themselves. Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. said the 612 welds for which they are seeking waivers of rules established by the U.S. Department of Transportation "are among those determined in an Alyeska audit to contain borderline variances not strictly in compliance with federal regulations for the pipeline."

Alyeska added that if the Ford administration approves its waiver requests, the flaws "will not jeopardize the integrity of the welds or the safety of the pipeline as a whole."

Last month Alyeska said it would seek initial exemptions for only 11 welds, but noted more waiver requests probably would follow.

"However," Alyeska said Wednesday, "the Department of Transportation requested that Alyeska make initial application for all exemptions which might be sought."

The consortium created by the eight major oil companies building the $7.1 billion line said it therefore "included all welds containing minor variances of types shown in an Alyeska fracture mechanics study to be harmless."

GAMBLING MEASURE OFF BALLOT

OLYMPIA (AP) — An initiative measure which would have allowed casino-type gambling has been rejected, for the November ballot by Washington State Secretary Bruce Chapman.

Meanwhile, Chapman said signature checking was still under way Wednesday on the only remaining initiative proposal not acted on. It would ban fluoridation of public water supplies. "It's close and could go either way," he said.

Election workers in his office checked 117,945 of the 136,000 signatures submitted by the gambling measure's backers, Chapman said. Of those checked, 21,349, or almost 16 per cent were invalid.

Of the invalid signatures, 15,472 were of persons not registered to vote and 5,877 were duplicate signatures, which, under law invalidates both signings.

No State Rule

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — The Indian government will extend central rule from New Delhi over the western state of Gujarat for another six months, the news agency Samachar reported Monday. Gujarat was put under direct central rule, known as president's rule, early this year after the People's Front Coalition government was brought down by defections less than eight months after it was elected.

FORD ASKS KELLEY REPORT

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Ford asked U.S. Attorney General Edward Levi Wednesday for a report within "the next day or so" about allegations that FBI Director

Clarence Kelley improperly accepted gifts and personal services from his subordinates.

The president's request followed Kelly's public admission Tuesday that bureau personnel had given him presents and performed decorating services at his Bethesda apartment.

The Washington Post reported Wednesday that, as a result of these actions, two high-ranking Justice department officials had recommended to Levi that Kelly be fired or publicly reprimanded.

Levi has not yet made a decision about either recommendation.

Stripped, Sickened Hays Quits Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Stripped of his political power and sickened by sex-scandal allegations, Wayne Hays has resigned from Congress just four months short of a 28-year Washington career.

Hays submitted his resignation in writing Wednesday to Ohio Gov. James Rhodes, with a copy to speaker Carl Albert.

The House ethics committee immediately met and announced it had closed its investigation of Elizabeth Ray's charges that Hays paid her $14,000 a year in federal funds to serve as other purpose than to be his mistress.

Based on his 27 years and eight months in Congress, Hays will take a $30,240 a year pension into retirement under a plan in which he contributes 8 per cent of his monthly salary.

Hays' resignation came in an uncharacteristic, one-sentence statement:

"Dear Sir: I hereby resign my office as representative in the Congress of the United States from the 18th district of Ohio, effective immediately. With great respect, Wayne L. Hays."

Rhodes said Hays called him earlier Wednesday to say the letter was in the mail and to ask that his congressional staff be kept intact at least until a successor is elected.

Still pending against the 65-year-old Ohio Democrat, however, is a grand jury probe into whether he misused federal funds, which is a criminal violation.

Ford-Carter Debates Tee Off September 23

Vaccine Supply Hopeless

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The production of swine flu vaccine has fallen so far behind schedule that the U.S. government will get only one-fourth of the doses it expects when the program starts Oct. 1. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare David Mathews said Wednesday.

Even by Nov. 30, the height of the flu season, the government will not have enough vaccine from the four makers to offer protection to all 142 million Americans it now recommends should get swine flu shots in the largest mass immunization program in U.S. history.

In letters to the manufacturers, Mathews urged a stepped-up production schedule.

But two of the vaccine makers said they are already on a full production schedule, working 24 hours a day, seven days a week to produce and package the vaccine.

Fred Land, general counsel for Richardson-Merrell, one of the vaccine makers, blamed the production delay on the stalemate between drug companies and their insurance carriers over liability for the swine flu program.

Until that stalemate was settled by Congress Aug. 11, the drug companies did not convert the vaccine from bulk form to concentrated vials that can be given to patients — a process that takes about six weeks.

Land said the original drug company estimates, which called for 74 million doses to be available by Oct. 1, were made in June and based on being able to put vaccine in vials by July 1.

Times News Services
WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter and President Ford agreed Wednesday to meet for three nationally televised debates, with the first live confrontation scheduled for Sept. 23.

The debates will be the first between presidential candidates since those between John Kennedy and Richard Nixon in 1960.

Negotiators for the two candidates reached agreement on the format after a meeting Wednesday with representatives of the League of Women Voters, sponsor of the debates.

In addition to the three debates involving the presidential candidates, an unprecedented debate between the two vice-presidential candidates, Republican Senator Bob Dole and Democratic Senator Walter Mondale, will be held after the second Carter-Ford meeting.

The topic for the first Ford-Carter debate will be economic and domestic issues. The second debate topic will be defense and foreign policy and the final meeting will be open to any subject.

Both Ford and Carter approved the agreement.

Meanwhile, declaring that "the world is still a dangerous place," Ford Wednesday hit what he called "the voices of retreat" who advocate U.S. troop reductions overseas.

The president's speech, a strong defense of administrative policies, came as the latest Gallup Poll showed Ford slipping 5 points in a race against Carter, an obvious target of the speech.

The poll, taken on Aug. 27 to 30, showed Carter leading the president 52 per cent to 37 per cent, with 11 per cent of voters undecided.

In the last previous poll, taken immediately after the Republican National Convention, Ford made a dramatic gain on Carter, closing to within 10 points, 49 per cent to 39 per cent.

Elsewhere on the campaign front Carter spokesman Rex Granum said the candidate will sell his stock holdings if elected, but has not decided what to do about his Georgia peanut business or farms.

Carter made public his 1975 federal income tax returns Wednesday, showing he paid $17,484 in taxes on a total income of $126,128.

He also issued a financial balance sheet showing that at the end of 1975 his net worth was $881,982, including assets of $819,261 and liabilities of $72,851.

The poll, taken on Aug. 27 to 30, showed Carter leading the president 52 per cent to 37 per cent, with 11 per cent of voters undecided.

In the last previous poll, taken immediately after the Republican National Convention, Ford made a dramatic gain on Carter, closing to within 10 points, 49 per cent to 39 per cent.

Elsewhere on the campaign front Carter spokesman Rex Granum said the candidate will sell his stock holdings if elected, but has not decided what to do about his Georgia peanut business or farms.

Carter made public his 1975 federal income tax returns Wednesday, showing he paid $17,484 in taxes on a total income of $126,128.

He also issued a financial balance sheet showing that at the end of 1975 his net worth was $881,982, including assets of $819,261 and liabilities of $72,851.

Volunteer Impact Remains

Breaking Ground, a new program initiated by the Victoria Volunteer Bureau, ends today but its impact will continue for a long time, says co-ordinator Margaret Haines.

Made possible by a $5,238.20 Secretary of State grant, the program enrolled 75 students, some as young as 13, into Victoria's volunteer force.

Project workers Colleen Hamilton, 24, and Brian Butterfield, 26, began preparing for Breaking Ground on May 17, visiting and recruiting volunteers in about 20 Greater Victoria schools.

After training, the students spent their summer on a variety of tasks, ranging from helping retarded children and children with learning problems, working at day care centres, and visiting the lonely and the aged.

"Some older people have looked at what these young people are doing and are really pleased with it, although they were a little hesitant at the beginning of the summer," Hamilton said.

Among those who have benefited from Breaking Ground is an elderly woman in Oak Bay who has had her dog walked regularly by a 14-year-old boy.

There were some frustrations, such as one experienced by a Chinese student from St. Michael's University School.

He volunteered to visit an elderly Chinese patient at Glengarry Hospital only to find the patient spoke neither English nor Mandarin and he didn't know the dialect spoken by the patient.

Haines says there are never enough volunteers to meet the demands of the 109 organiza-

JAPANESE COLLEGE SET

NANAIMO (UPI) — The first "offshore campus" ever established by a Japanese university in North America was formally dedicated Wednesday, ushering in a new era in Japanese-Canadian cultural ties.

The 80-acre site, a former cattle ranch, has been bought for $265,000 for the Tamagawa University of Tokyo for agricultural research and to give Canadian and Japanese students a greater appreciation of each other's way of life.

"Today there is a great demand in the world to educate internationally-minded and cultured persons who are able to accept anyone in any culture, religion or country," said university president Tetsuro Obara.

More than 300 people, including Canadian and Japanese officials and Tamagawa faculty members, attended the ceremony.

A busload of Canadian and Japanese VIPs got lost through fog en route to the ceremonies.

Some of the Breaking Ground volunteers will carry on after school starts and Haines is hoping they will recruit others.

Debbie, a 14-year-old, said it all in a report on her summer:

"It showed me that getting up and doing something is better than watching TV."

giant pulp mill, smoke belching from its stacks. The bus reached the site two hours late. The ceremony had already started.

"I don't suggest for one minute it is a usual thing for people from government to be lost in a fog," Sen. Ray Perrault, one of the passengers, quipped.

The first group of about 50 students probably will arrive next summer. Eventually the number will be built up to about 100. Students will remain a year, living on campus and with Canadian families in the area. Canadian students also will be welcome to study the Japanese language and political system.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An 18-year-old Sooke resident Wednesday became the first person to face a charge in Victoria provincial court as a result of what Sooke RCMP described Aug. 14 as a two-part near-riot early that day.

Gary James McDonagh, 5733 Sooke, was charged with possession of a weapon Aug. 14 for a purpose dangerous to the public peace. The charge described the weapon as "a steel pipe approximately 12 inches in length with a large nut affixed to the end thereof."

McDonagh chose trial by judge and jury, then was remanded for one week by presiding Judge Blake Allan so a lawyer could be retained before a preliminary hearing date was set. McDonagh was on a promise to appear.

RCMP said 50 persons were involved in the first part of the incident and 150 in the second half. Seventeen policemen were needed to cool things down and police said they planned at least seven charges against five persons.

Two persons charged after a disturbance shortly after midnight Tuesday in Saanich pleaded guilty to a joint charge of causing a disturbance by fighting and were fined $100 each by Allan.

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan said Clifford Michael Leachman, 17, of 340 Goward, and David Allan Redstrom, 19, of Jasmine, were "part of a large group of youths" in the 4500-block Tanglewood.

Mulligan said police "had some difficulty trying to disperse the crowd and the fight of Redstrom and Leachman contributed to the disturbance."

Barry Phillip DeCosta, 17, of 991 Maddison pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of a break-in and mischief early Aug. 19 at the A and W Drive-In, 1921 Oak Bay, while David Clive Harrison, 17, of 971 Maddison, pleaded guilty to a charge of a break-in and theft at the same time.

Mulligan said both broke in and DeCosta took a fire extinguisher and sprayed its contents around the interior. Then DeCosta left and Harrison took $5.

Allan remanded both youths to Sept. 29 for pre-sentence reports and sentence, saying he hoped the report for DeCosta would contain an estimate of the damage.

Ronald Joseph Northrup, 41, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of possession of a known stolen $135 radio shortly after it was taken Aug. 23 from a room in the Kings Hotel, 570 Yates. Mulligan said Northrup had "a lengthy criminal record" with two similar convictions in 1975 and Allan decided on a penalty of four months in jail.

Jerry Joseph Mason, 52, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of theft of a $37.95 clothing item Aug. 13 from a Market Square store and was sentenced by Allan to six months in a detention centre for alcoholics. The term will run at the same time as a six-month sentence imposed last Friday in Port Alberni for a similar matter.

Allan Wirsz, 37, pleaded not guilty to a Sooke charge of common assault Feb. 21 and his trial was set for Dec. 29. On Feb. 21, Wirsz was a correctional officer at the Jordon River detention camp and the person who complained of an assault was an inmate.

A suspended sentence and 12-month term of probation were set by Allan for Mayne Island resident Anna Lee Morbin, 28, who pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of taking $66.81 worth of clothing Aug. 6 from the T. Eaton Co. She was on probation at the time for similar offences but had agreed to counselling and decided not to go shopping alone.

In the court section of Judge William Ostler, a higher-court trial was ordered for Brian Berryman Bruce, 27, of 91 Lurline, after a preliminary hearing of a charge of possession of marijuana May 6 in Saanich for the purpose of trafficking.

Largest fine Wednesday in traffic court was a total of $700 imposed by Judge F. S. Green against William Thomas Barrie Jones, 43, of New Westminster, found guilty after a trial on a Colwood charge of impaired driving and refusing to take a breath-analysis test Feb. 18.

Bryan Michael Ernest Buisse, 21, of 2283 Moyes, pleaded guilty to a Colwood charge of impaired driving Sunday and was fined $200 while Guillaume Hervieux Da Costa, 21, of 2009 Millstream, pleaded guilty to a Colwood charge of driving Aug. 21 with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent and was fined $475.

The Six Cuts —No Reason Or Explanation

OTTAWA (CP) — Saying there would be no explanations or reasons, Sam Pollock announced Wednesday evening six cuts, none real surprises, from Team Canada on the eve of the opening game of the six-country Canada Cup hockey tournament.

Pollock, team manager, said he and the four coaches "took everything into consideration and don't have to justify" dropping five National Hockey League players and one from the World Hockey Association.

They were goalie Dan Bouchard of Atlanta Flames, defenceman Dave Burrows of Pittsburgh Penguins and forwards Dan Malone of Detroit Red Wings, Jim Pronovost of Pittsburgh and Rene Robert of Buffalo Sabres. The WHA cut was defenceman Paul Schmyr of Cleveland Crusaders.

Pollock, who is general manager of the defending Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens, said he announced Team Canada's 25-man roster at the conclusion of the Wednesday team dinner. The six players given no advance warning their active role with Team Canada was at an end.

However the six remain full members of the team in terms of money awards and can stay with the team or return home.

BOUCHARD 'STUNNED, UPSET'

OTTAWA (CP) — Goal-tender Dan Bouchard, one of six Team Canada players cut Wednesday, said he was "stunned and upset" by the move which he blamed on politics in the team's training camp.

Bouchard of the National Hockey League's Atlanta Flames, said he understood that team selections would be based on training camp performances but it appeared the experience played a greater role.

He said in an interview that he had the best training camp and exhibition game record and the other goaltenders, Rogatien Vachon of Los Angeles Kings, Gerry Cheevers of Boston Bruins and Glenn Reach of New York Islanders had "not been as good."

Pronovost was upset at the decision and would not talk with reporters. Robert, seen briefly at the team's hotel, appeared shaken.

Bouchard said he "had put out at training camp. But politics was being played at the camp and I could feel it."

'Our Best' vs. World

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Canada Cup tournament gets underway tonight featuring the six strongest hockey-playing nations in a round-robin affair that hockey fans hope will finally give them a world's best.

"Most Canadians put this brand of hockey ahead of eating, sleeping or whatever," tournament chairman Alan Eagleson said at a Toronto luncheon for the six national clubs Wednesday.

"This is the first time it's been our best against the world's best."

Team Canada, a dazzling collection of superstars from the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association, opens tournament play in Ottawa tonight against Finland.

The United States plays its tournament opener against Sweden in Toronto on Friday and that evening the Soviet Union will take on world champion Czechoslovakia in Montreal.

The star-studded team Canada is the team to beat in this round-robin tournament.

"When you run down the roster of Team Canada you sometimes wonder what anyone else is doing here," said Carl Brewer, a former NHLer and assistant coach of the Finnish team.

Team Canada features the high-scoring Philadelphia Flyers line of Bobby Clarke, Rogatien Leach-Bill Barber, the Montreal Canadiens' Peter Mahovlich-Guy Lafleur-Steve Shutt, a new look line of the Buffalo Sabres' Rick Martin-Gil Perreault-Danny Gare and Marcel Dionne with veterans Phil Esposito and Bobby Hull.

Brewer said a number of Finnish players have come down with colds and heading into tonight's game against Canada "I have no idea what to expect."

Brewer said the only thing certain heading into the tournament is that all the competition will be tough. He had a word of caution for the four top-ranked teams too, don't overlook the Americans.

"Don't forget every one of their players is a professional in the NHL or the WHA. We have four, and a lot of guys who work eight hours a day and practice hockey at night. What can Finland do but hope for the best."

Team Canada scored an impressive 24 goals during pre-tournament exhibition game wins over the United States (10-3, 7-3) and the Czechs (7-4), but Bowman said he would like to see the goals against lowered. "We'd like to get our forwards up a bit more, forechecking," he said.

The tone of the Soviet Sport article, which also said the trainers had failed to educate the players with the will to win, suggested that the resignations would almost certainly be accepted.

Kevin Hits for Six

NEW WESTMINSTER — Kevin Alexander, hampered by leg and shoulder injuries throughout the playoffs, recovered his regular-season form with a vengeance Wednesday, sparking Victoria McDonalds to a 16-12 decision over Burnaby Cablevision to square the best-of-seven Western Canada's Junior Lacrosse Playoff final, 2-2.

Alexander scored six goals and assisted on four others as the Bakers picked up their second straight win.

The Victoria club gets a chance to move ahead while playing host to Burnaby in a game at 8 p.m. Friday at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Bakers, who won the third game 14-12 in overtime Sunday at Victoria, led all-the-way Wednesday with period scores of 5-4 and 11-9.

Alexander came up with his best game of the playoffs, controlling the face-offs — winning six straight at one point — and showed that his speed was back by scoring twice on breakaways.

Kevin Kennedy, Jim Boyd, Ken King, Ross McKinstry and Doug Angrove scored the other Victoria goals while Randy Delmonico (3), John Krgovich (2), Derek Dickson (2), Dan Perrault (2), Mat Aitken, Kelly McLeanahan and John Swan replied for Burnaby.

Coach Bill Munro used his offence-defence system to good advantage in the third period to keep Burnaby off balance. He kept the high-scoring line on offence but switched over to the top defensive line whenever Cable gained possession.

Al Radley came up with an outstanding performance in the Victoria goal, making a total of 46 stops. Jim Greenwell and Rod Barnister, who came in at 9:30 of the first period, combined for 38 saves in the Burnaby net.

Meanwhile, Bramalea Excelsiors downed Peterborough Grey-Minnows 11-9 Wednesday to take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Ontario Lacrosse Association final.

The Ontario winner will visit the Western Canada winner for the Minto Cup national final.

Bombers Scuttle Stamps With Harassment Tactic

WINNIPEG (CP) — An effective pass rush and explosive offence carried Winnipeg Blue Bombers to a 29-20 win over Calgary Stampeders on Wednesday night and back into the playoff battle in the Western Football Conference.

The Winnipeg defensive line of Jim Heighton, Dave Knechtel, Gary Shugrue and newcomer Don Hubbard harassed Calgary quarterback Tom Sherman all night.

Blue Bomber coach Bud Riley called it the "best pass rush since he's been in Winnipeg and gave credit to Sherman for surviving the whole game.

After a 53-yard pass to Scott Brock hit Mark McDonald for 52 yards and Scott for 13 before Jay Washington ran from the five for the score 43 seconds into the final quarter.

Winnipeg's first touchdown, in the second quarter, came just as suddenly. Trailing 9-3, the Bombers put together three first downs before Brock found Scott wide open in Calgary territory and hit him with a 47-yard scoring strike.

Besides his two touchdowns, Scott ran back a kickoff 89 yards, then caught a 16-yard pass to set up a field goal with the Bombers ahead 13-12. He finished with five receptions for 117 yards.

On the next play, Tom Scott made a diving catch in the end zone for a 32-yard touchdown that provided Winnipeg with a 29-12 margin with less than 10 minutes left.

Although Sherman completed 22 of 38 pass attempts, he was often hit just as he let the ball go. That pressure forced him to overthrow his target on a number of occasions when he had receivers wide open, and also contributed to three pass interceptions, one of which led to the touchdown that solidified the Winnipeg victory.

Shugrue and Heighton were breathing down Sherman's neck as he released the ball early in the fourth quarter and the pass landed in the arms of Winnipeg linebacker Jerry Walters.

That allowed Ralph Brock to lead the Winnipeg offence back onto the field and they had 13 of the 23 fans on their feet in seconds.

On the next play, Tom Scott made a diving catch in the end zone for a 32-yard touchdown that provided Winnipeg with a 29-12 margin with less than 10 minutes left.

The Calgary defence bottled up Winnipeg's offence almost completely in the first half, limiting it to just 123 yards total offence. But it was only a matter of time until Brock and company broke loose.

Lee May, a Low Key Hitter of Homers

By The Associated Press

Home-run hitters are supposed to drive fancy cars and hog the headlines, but one of the best of the breed, Lee May of Baltimore Orioles, labors in obscurity.

The spotlight has somehow never shone on May who has hit 20 or more home runs in each of the last nine seasons.

He reached that plateau again Wednesday night, when he hit his 24th as the Orioles beat Kansas City Royals 8-1 in an American League baseball game.

His homer gave him a share of the league lead with Sal Bando of Oakland A's and his four runs batted in raised his league-leading total to 90. Still the headlines escape him.

"That has been the story of my life," May said. "I have learned to live with it."

"But if you do enough, the owners know it and they give you a decent salary. A lot of guys like to see their names in the papers, but I don't read the papers. I don't care about ink. I'm a low-key guy."

In Wednesday's other American League games, Boston Red Sox beat Texas Rangers 3-0, Minnesota Twins edged Milwaukee Brewers 3-2 in 12 innings, Cleveland Indians blanked Chicago White Sox 3-0, California Angels defeated Detroit Tigers 4-1 and Oakland A's shut out New York Yankees 5-0.

May's three-run homer in the fifth inning capped a five-run outburst that broke the game open for the Orioles. Reggie Jackson hit a two-run single right before May connected.

Ferguson Jenkins' season ended in the fifth inning against Texas, when the Boston pitcher suffered a torn right Achilles tendon in making a putout at first base. He faces surgery today.

Jenkins allowed four hits for 4-1-3 innings, then reliever Tom Murphy held Texas hitless the rest of the way for the win.

Cleveland won its fifth in a row as Jim Bibby, 10-5, pitched a five-hitter. Ray Fosse homered and Buddy Bell doubled home one run and scored another.

Oakland pulled to within seven games of first-place Kansas City in the West as Vida Blue stopped the Yankees on seven hits. The A's

THE AGELESS HORSE

Racing and Winning at 16

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Stonehenge, a 16-year-old thoroughbred, is still racing at an age equivalent to more than 100 for a human. Nearly a decade ago, veterinarians twice recommended the gelding be put to sleep.

Stonehenge is not only racing at 16, he's winning—or at least he won a race at Erie's Commodore Downs on Friday, Aug. 13. The chestnut gelding ran a mile and 70 yards in a respectable clocking of 1:47.

"We hope to race him some more because he misses the track when we put him down on the farm," says owner Grace Kaehur, whose late husband Andy claimed Stonehenge for $1,500 when the gelding was a six-year-old in 1966.

Some states force horses to retire at a certain age, but in Pennsylvania it's up to the discretion of the steward.

Ray Hopton, state steward at Commodore Downs, has given Stonehenge the go-ahead to race here.

How much longer can Stonehenge continue racing?

"Even now, he acts like a two-year-old," said Mrs. Kaehur. "If he's still fit, we hope to to run him next year."

TIDAL SURVEYS BEGIN

The United States' research vessel McArthur began making current and tidal surveys near Zero Rock in Haro Strait Wednesday.

Mike Bolton, Canada's regional hydrographer in Victoria, said today the McArthur will work in and out of Canadian waters until late December, tying up at Anacortes on the weekends.

The 185-foot vessel, painted in the U.S. Coast Guard's distinctive red and white colors, will lay current meter arrays (monitors) at different depths in order to gauge the force of currents.

Bolton said the McArthur's work is part of a reciprocal program between the U.S. and Canada, which is in its third year.

"It is mutually beneficial. Tides and currents don't stop at international boundaries," Bolton said.

He explained the survey work will cover the Puget Sound and the Straits of Georgia and Juan de Fuca.

Port Angeles Sets Vote on Oil

PORt ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — Local voters will get the chance in November to show how they feel on the issue of building a major oil-handling port near their community.

City council voted 5-2 Tuesday night to put the issue on the general election ballot, although the outcome will have no binding effect.

"The will of the people is clear," said Earl Anderson, one of the two council members who voted against the ballot proposal. "I don't need a ballot to tell me my Reagan ... now it's back to work!

Reagan Takes to Air

HOLLYWOOD. — Citizen Reagan has gone back to work, munching his customary jellybeans and saying he will put in a good word now and then for his former rival, President Ford.

He didn't say how often that would be.

It was the first day back on the job for the defeated GOP presidential candidate, returning to his syndicated radio commentary program.

Several show business friends, including Jack Webb and Art Linkletter, looked on as Reagan, dressed informally in a short-sleeved shirt and nibbling the jellybeans that have been a trademark since his days as governor of California, recorded 12 three-minute radio commentaries for use beginning Sept. 20.

Pressed to say what else he would do to help Ford in his battle with Democrat Jimmy Carter, Reagan said he expects to make a number of speeches on his own, not coordinated or arranged by the Ford campaign.

"I get invitations from various party organizations in many states," he said.

He had 340 stations carrying the programs before he had to suspend broadcasting when he became an announced candidate. He had 225 newspapers carrying his syndicated column, which he also plans to resume.

He said he would appear at a fund-raising dinner for the Republican National Committee in Los Angeles Oct. 7. (Reagan aide Michael Deaver told a Los Angeles Times reporter the day before that Reagan had agreed before the party's convention to address the dinner and his appearance should not be construed as campaigning for Ford.)

Last-Serving War Prisoners Retiring from Armed Forces

OTTAWA. — Two generals soon to retire from the armed forces are believed the last serving air force officers taken prisoner in Germany during the Second World War, the defence department said Wednesday. Maj.-Gen. J. I. Davies, 55, of Winnipeg, chief of personnel careers and senior appointments, and Brig.-Gen. D. W. J. Carr, 52, of Hamilton, director-general of personnel services, are to leave the forces this month. Davies was shot down on a raid over Hamburg in 1941 and spent almost four years in a prisoner-of-war camp before his release in 1945. Carr's aircraft was ditched in the Zuider Zee in 1944 and he was held prisoner for one year.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The husband of country music singer Tammy Wynette denies reports their two-month-old marriage is on the rocks. Michael Tomlin, a real estate executive and Miss Wynette's fourth husband, earlier refused comment on the reports, but after a Nashville television station broadcast word of the reports Tuesday,

Prisoner Suing For Sex Hormone

AUSTIN, Tex. — A 24-year-old man suing a jailer for withholding his female hormone tablets hopes to be awarded enough money to pay for a sex change operation.

Scott Cark, wore a stylish print dress, earrings, heels and hose Wednesday to announce he has filed a $100,000 lawsuit against a Travis County jailer.

He was jailed Dec. 19, 1974, in the burglary of a hamburger shop where he was night manager. He said he was placed in the "C" tank where, he alleged, homosexuals are confined in the Travis county jail.

"I am not now, nor ever have been, a homosexual," he said. "Transsexuality has nothing to do with sexual relations—it has to do with the identity of oneself as a male or female."

Jailer Bill Mansell deprived him of female hormone which had been prescribed by a doctor, he added.

Without the hormones his male characteristics began to reappear—facial hair, toughened skin, and smaller breasts—and he became very depressed and frustrated, he testified.

He was released Aug. 27, 1975, after serving 10 months.

JERUSALEM. — Prime Minister Trudeau returned Wednesday to the place where he was imprisoned overnight by Jordanian authorities 27 years ago. As the prime minister began a walking tour along the Via Dolorosa, he looked up at a building opposite the first Station of the Cross and pointed to a second-story window of an old stone building. FAST-TALKING CLERK FOILS ROBBERY BID

DENVER. — Clerk Richard Zendejas talked a would-be robber out of holding up his liquor store by convincing the man it was a bad idea.

Zendejas told police the man purchased a six-pack of beer then held up a can of Mace saying, "I'm going to rob you."

"You don't want to do that," Zendejas replied.

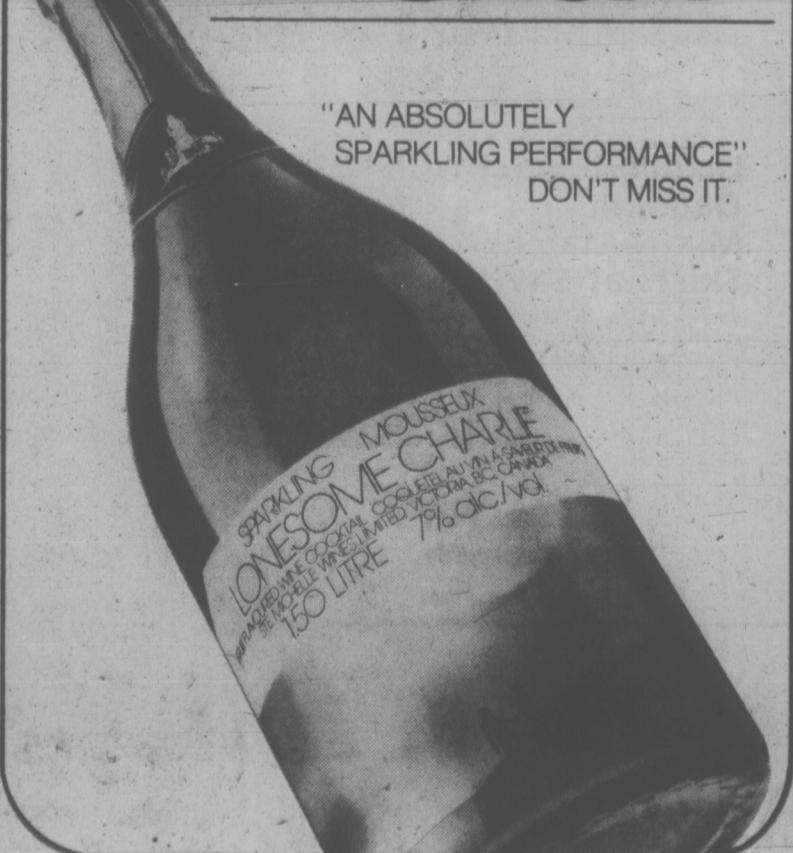

He said the man replied: "I have to. My wife left me and I've lost my house. I need the money."

"Well, I just don't think you want to rob me, that's all," Zendejas answered.

Construction
Drops 25%

NORTH COWICHAN — Construction was down by more than 25 per cent in this municipality during the first eight months of this year.

In a monthly report issued by the North Cowichan building inspector on building permit values, which is used as an indicator of construction activity, it states that the corresponding value this year stands at $9,182,445, compared to $12,585,733 in 1975.

The greatest decline in this period is seen in construction of multi-family dwellings, which shows that only 36 units have been built this year, compared to 280 last year.

This represents a difference of more than $3.5 million in construction loss.

Although there has been a decline in apartment and condominium construction, there has been an increase in single-family dwellings.

In that category, 184 permits were issued at $8,339,100 have been issued this year, compared to 166 valued at $4,711,110 during the same period in the previous year.

AIB

Surprise Visit . . .
Drug Squad Style

BY DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

It was just a routine drug search.

Tuesday, 9 a.m., Peter MacLean and his wife Robin, both 25, are dozing in bed unaware seven police officers are collecting outside their small four-room bungalow at 22 Midwood in Vlew Royal.

One group of officers approaches the front door; another the back. At a signal they break through, splintering the frame of one door, knocking the lock off the other.

Guns drawn, they rush into a bedroom and seize the MacLeans by the throat, jab fingers into their mouths, feeling along their gums and under their curled-up tongue.

"Don't swallow," an officer says.

"What?" mumbles Robin, wide-eyed.

The officers release their grip. One stands by the bedroom door while they get dressed.

The rest start searching the house — emptying dresser drawers and closets, overturning boxes, opening cupboards and jars and suitcases, shaking the dirt out of potted plants, looking in old shoes, under carpets, inside the arms of chairs. After one hour and 40 minutes, it's over.

They take some objects — MacLean says he doesn't know what — and leave.

"We'll be back," says an officer going out the door.

Just a routine search, police said later. It happens almost every day somewhere in Greater Victoria.

All an officer needs is reasonable and probable grounds that a drug offence is being committed for him to burst into any home any time — his authority, an open warrant called a writ of assistance.

"It gives us enormous power," says one drug officer. "But we have to rely on the integrity and good judgment of the officers."

The MacLeans can understand police have to do certain things in drug investigations, like breaking in unannounced and grabbing people by the throat to make sure drugs aren't swallowed or disposed of in some other way. They can accept the fact there have to be searches.

What they can't understand is if the police find nothing, if no charges are laid, if the person being searched is innocent of any wrongdoing, then why should the person have to clean up the mess and pay for damages done?

They feel it's wrong, and today or Friday intend to file a claim with the RCMP for compensation to cover the cost of repairing the doors (about $100) and replacing a figurine that was broken in the search.

The MacLeans say police raided their place five weeks ago while they were both out, caused some damage then left without finding anything.

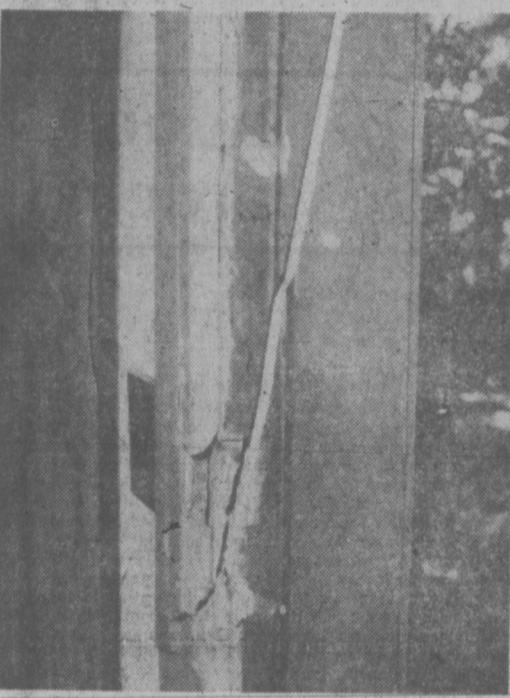

Peter who is unemployed and admits he has a lengthy record dating back to when he was a juvenile but says he's now trying to mend his ways, is fed up with "police harassment."

He says he's been beaten up, forced to strip in a public park and had his jacket ripped in recent encounters with police.

A spokesman for the Greater Victoria drug squad said anyone can make a claim for damages but didn't know how many persons actually did.

He said there was noonus on police to clean up a mess created in searching.

It all depends on the officer, he said.

DOCTORS WERE WORRIED
Tighter Rules
For Abortions

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospitals have adopted tighter routines for approving abortions, requiring patients to sign a statement and their doctors to answer more questions.

Dr. Ray Lefebvre, medical director at Jubilee, said the changes reflect the uneasiness felt by some doctors, particularly those directly involved, that abortion committees have been virtually rubber-stamping applications.

There were 403 applications considered by the committee at Jubilee last year and 402 approved. At Victoria General, the committee reviewed 621 applications and approved 613.

The number of abortions performed at Victoria's two general hospitals totalled 955 last year, about one for every three live births.

In addition to the tighter requirements for abortion applications, doctors and both hospital boards have jointly adopted slightly revamped guidelines for approving abortions.

The Criminal Code makes a therapeutic abortion lawful where a hospital's abortion committee (composed of doctors who do not do the operation) certifies it believes continuation of the pregnancy would or would be likely to endanger the life or health of the woman.

Local practice has been for abortion committees to make their decision simply on a letter from the patient's doctor.

Under the new format the patient becomes directly involved in the application which comes before the abortion committee. She must sign a statement which asks for the abortion because it will or may have "an adverse affect on my health."

The statement also notes that her doctor has explained her decision may affect her health or future fertility and arrangements have been made to give her contraceptive advice.

Instead of a letter, the patient's doctor must now complete a standard application for the abortion committee which details the patient's medical and some social history.

Among questions to be answered: does the father of the child wish the patient to have an abortion?

Dr. D. C. Carlow, medical director at Victoria General, said both hospitals operate with what is in effect a single abortion committee which makes its decisions by majority vote.

About 95 per cent of abortions are approved on grounds the mental upset of continuing the pregnancy would endanger health, he said.

In most cases the operation is done before the fetus is 10 weeks old and the patient is in and out of hospital the same day.

The new format and revised guidelines follow study of the issue by a committee of five doctors and examination of practices at other hospitals.

The guidelines suggest applications may be approved when the patient strongly desires an abortion and any factor is present which poses a significant threat to her life or health.

Where the threat is to mental health, psychiatric symptoms prior to and following diagnosis of pregnancy should be specified.

Approval cannot be granted solely at the request of the patient.

Economic Forecast
'Looks Very Grim'

The economy of the Victoria area went flat in August and is almost certain to get much worse by winter, Canada Manpower regional manager Stan Purdy said today.

"If workers are willing to give up one day's pay, it should make him wonder what the hell they are going to do when they get to the ballot box," Smalley said in response to one delegate.

Jim Walker, president of the city outside workers represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said his members seem to feel the work stoppage should be longer than one day to make a real impression on the government.

Council delegates solidly supported the protest day, with the exception of regional district employees' spokesman Ken Robertson, of GUPE Local 1978. Robertson said his local has not yet discussed participation.

The council formed a committee headed by president John Schibl to co-ordinate labor activities on protest day.

Smalley said the council committee will work with committees from local unions to decide what form the protest will take here.

A special meeting will be held Sept. 15 to complete plans and delegates from non-affiliates of the council will be invited.

Smalley said there has been no major B.C.-wide demonstration planned at the legislature and protest activities are designed to stay at the local level.

Although in most cases rank and file union members haven't had a chance to vote on participation in the stoppage, Smalley said the one-day protest is "already ready on its way."

Ships. The remainder piles up on the docks and/or other storage space available.

"And the lumber moving out is not being sold. It is going to the eastern U.S. for stockpiling until market conditions improve. Some of it is also going to the United Kingdom, again for stockpiling. These market conditions are general for all companies in British Columbia."

Purdy said troubles in the forest industry are much more severe than most people think because they see ships being loaded and think all is well.

"In fact, very little lumber is being sold."

This means unemployment is certain to increase over the next few months and should hit its highest level in January or early February.

Ironically, there are hundreds of jobs available in Alberta, where unemployment continues to be at about the three per cent level.

"There has been very little interest in the Alberta jobs so far," he said.

Adding to the local woes is the construction dispute, with another lockout-strike situation scheduled to begin Tuesday morning.

The tourist industry continues to be in a slump but retail sales are holding fairly well and in fact are slightly higher than last August. Appliances, household accessories and ladies' fashions were selling well but furniture sales were slower.

The figures do not include the back-to-school sales spurt which is just beginning. With school opening until Sept. 7, the going-back sales were delayed until early September instead of late August.

The employment level in the Yarrow shipyard has fallen to 310 from a 1976 high of 900 with only three repair jobs on the books. The Oakland Industries fish cannery is employing 130 and has not needed a night shift or overtime, unlike past years.

Fogbound Fishermen Fear Deepsea Ships

Merchant ships charging through early-morning fog in Juan de Fuca Strait are endangering the lives of commercial fishermen, Victoria fisherman Scotty Neish said today.

The latest incident on Tuesday is just one of many over the years, Neish said.

Vancouver fisherman Harry Tanguelle was anchored two miles west of Port Renfrew, fishing for salmon. He was picking up his net to unload scrap fish when a ship bore down on him at 16 to 18 knots.

"The fog was thick and I had been moving I wouldn't have had a chance. She came within 30 or 40 feet of me," Tanguelle said.

"This has been an on-going battle between the fishermen and the big multinational shipping companies for years," said Neish, of 2409 Currie Road.

They Portray History Through Clothing

elizabeth

It's an ambitious and, at the same time, an imaginative idea! One that stretches into the future and that will take patience, understanding and determination to carry through.

Members of the Canadian Costume Society of British Columbia and Western Canada are aware of that. Nevertheless, they are enthusiastically dedicated to the project.

To work toward the eventual establishment of a complete and comprehensive costume museum, somewhere in one of the four western provinces.

"Such a museum would be of great value to students of history, theatre, textiles and clothing design," the president, Mrs. M. H. (Marjorie) Aldersmith, believes.

In order to create a proper framework to cover all aspects of the project, the group became an incorporated society, early this year, under the Societies Act, and with its present name.

Its aims and objectives were set out as follows:

"To promote interest in historic garments; to preserve, to restore, to repair and display them, and to work closely with museums, art centres, and with groups of crafts-women and students who are especially interested in all the past and present needs related to clothing."

This issue created the authoritative status in which to receive all donations of historic artifacts or monetary gifts. The group was originally formed back in February, 1974, at the urging of Avis Walton, who had long been active in the historic costume field, and who had, by then, gathered an interesting personal collection — a good part of which she has since presented to the provincial archives.

It was decided to continue collecting books on the history of costumes as well, as old-time catalogues featuring dress of former eras, and to place some of them on loan to those who are responsibly interested.

"At present the books are all kept in homes of members," Mrs. Aldersmith explains, "with thought, of course, to a future when we will have them together, in a small library."

A costume advisory committee has been formed with Marguerite Hall in charge, assisted by Craigflower Manor's Jean Thompson.

Both are well versed in the history of costumes and have the knowledge "and the know-how" to advise on the authenticity of old-time gowns.

There is also restoration, mending and repairing committee headed by Vera Pipes and Iris Emerson.

This group of six expert needlewomen, is working steadily and hard, according to the president.

sories were given by people representing old time families, and these form the nucleus of the group's present collection.

Today, membership, that reaches out as far as Manitoba, numbers around 40 people — men and women in all age groups — all interested in preservation of this phase of our heritage.

At the annual meeting earlier this year, move to become incorporated was approved and Mrs. Aldersmith was named president.

Other executive members are Iris Emerson, first vice-president; Bill Walker of Vancouver, second vice-president; Margaret Hutton-Potts and Gwen Emerson, secretaries; Cathie Thomas, treasurer, and Violet Lawrie, membership.

Already the society has in its collection some 120 gowns and accessories, covering periods from 1852 to 1930, and including a set of undergarments worn by a young Queen Victoria.

Like the books, these are all in care of society members and, at present, are being carefully catalogued.

In future, costumes, accessories and other articles of historic interest, given to the society, will immediately be catalogued, data photographed in duplicate, and the name of the donor or donors and the history of the articles, recorded.

Some replicas of historic garments included in the present collection, have been donated by various groups, and they are available to schools, theatres and for lectures.

The society stages its own exhibitions and showings from time to time, with Richard Litt as production manager and Paddy Walton responsible for staging and properties.

Members are also arranging to present smaller showings for senior citizens at their centres and in Rose Manor.

At the moment plans are being finalized for a reception and tea in October for Mrs. Walton, who is to be named the society's first honorary president.

Other special guests will be donors of gowns and accessories since the group was formed back in 1974.

"It's going to be difficult to find everyone, as written

"They visit donors, carefully inspect the costumes offered and decide whether there is need for mending or restoring. They also decide whether a garment can be used for exhibition purposes or not."

records were not always kept in the beginning," Marjorie Aldersmith says, "but we are going to give it a good try."

"Not only would it give us an opportunity to invite them to the reception and tea, it would also help to bring our records up to date."

A Reminder — If you have an old-time garment or accessory, gathering dust in your attic, and you don't know what to do with it, the Canadian Costume Society of British Columbia and Western Canada would be happy to take it and add it to the collection its members hope to eventually see housed in a costume museum somewhere in western Canada.

Who knows — it could be right here in Victoria!

Dear Lynn and Joel:
I bought some potting soil from a plant shop to repot my Croton and Tri-Leaf Wonder. Both plants are doing very well, but all of a sudden some little mushrooms are growing out of the soil. Please tell me what these are and if the soil's all right. I'm so worried about this I can hardly sleep at night. — V.F.

Dear V.F.:
You shouldn't lose any sleep over the little mushrooms that popped up out of the soil. Undoubtedly some mushroom spores which float through the air like other fungus, germs and so forth found their way

Uta Hagen at work over her stove.

Well-Fed Murmurs Equal to Applause

Murmurs of approval at the end of a meal or the sound of clapping hands across the footlights, it all adds up to the same thing: "the sound that says 'love,'" to borrow a phrase from a Broadway musical of a few years back.

"Applause," Uta Hagen, the actress, was saying, "that's why I cook. If there's no one there to say 'thank you very much, that was delicious.' I stand up and eat from the refrigerator."

For years, we have known of Uta Hagen's reputation as an excellent cook. Thus, when we learned that she was a neighbor and had completed the manuscript for a highly personal cookbook, we telephoned for an interview.

"A lot of the recipes in my book," she told me, "are those I've made up myself or borrowed from friends."

"Some of my recipes are from my childhood in Germany. My mother was a professional singer — she sang Lieder and opera — and a marvelous cook. Unfortunately I didn't cook as a child, and I've simply had to recreate the dishes I liked best from memory."

For this particular occasion Miss Hagen had prepared a midsummer luncheon composed of several iced or chilled dishes including three irresistible cocktail appetizers — cheese puffs, olive puffs and smoked beef roulades; a cold chicken in aspic dish; new peas and new potatoes harvested that morning from her garden.

A catalogue of the various items in that garden, which she tends herself, is enough to send a non-gardener into a state of terminal exhaustion. There, in impossibly tended beds, is a summer-full-of trailing cucumbers, red tomatoes, yellow and green zucchini, green beans, carrots, lettuce and Brussels sprouts.

The indefatigable, endlessly resourceful Miss Hagen also boasts herbal plots of basil, rosemary, tarragon, thyme, arugula, dill and assorted mints. Not to mention proliferating stands of gladioli, roses, daisies, dahlias and "anything that will grow by the sea." When she has nothing else to do, she mows the lawn and does needlepoint.

Miss Hagen is currently married to Herbert Berghof, the Broadway director, and together they direct the H.B. acting studios in Greenwich Village. The studio has an enrollment of approximately 1,800 students, and Miss Hagen teaches acting three days a week.

Miss Hagen has appeared in scores of theatricals, to critical acclaim, since her debut in 1936 and has written a book on the profession titled "Respect for Acting." The title is in a sense related to her new book, which is titled "Uta Hagen's Love for Cooking." It will be published by Macmillan Publishing Co. Inc., in mid-October and the price is $12.50.

OLIVE PUFFS

cup sifted flour
cup butter at room temperature cup grated sharp cheddar cheese
Salt to taste
tsp. paprika
tsp. dry mustard
or more stuffed Spanish olives

2. Pinch off pieces of the dough and flatten with the hand to make small circles, each large enough to wrap around an olive. Transfer the balls to plastic bags and freeze until ready to use.

3. To cook, preheat the oven to 400 degrees and bake on an ungreased baking sheet about 15 minutes or until golden brown.

Yield: About 30 olive puffs.

Need for Frolic Acid Higher in Pregnancy

QUESTION:

Recently I have noticed magazine advertisements promoting orange juice and folic acid for women. What is folic acid and do women need more than men?

ANSWER:

Folic acid or folacin, is one member of the group of B vitamins which includes the better known thiamine, riboflavin and niacin. Folic acid is necessary to maintain healthy blood and normal functions of growing cells and tissues. Although everyone needs folic acid the requirements are greater for pregnant and nursing women and women using oral contraceptives.

tamin, or over three-times the adult daily requirement of 30 mg. Cooking destroys some of the Vitamin C, but even a cooked whole pepper is an excellent source of Vitamin C at 70 mg. Green peppers are also very low in Calories (15 calories per pepper), and therefore are an excellent choice for weight watchers at meals or as a snack.

To assure freshness, it is best to store eggs at low refrigerator temperatures in their original carton since they should be stored with the large end up and lightly covered.

QUESTION:

How can one tell if an egg is fresh? Can an egg which is not fresh be used?

ANSWER:

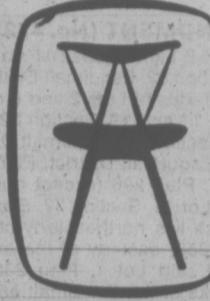

Generally, a fresh egg — an egg stored to retain its high quality — will have a large portion of thick white that stands up firmly when the egg is broken onto a flat surface, and not a thin, watery white which is less viscous and spreads out readily. Its yolk

Every meal should contain some good source of protein, because protein helps to build and repair body tissue. Meat is an ideal source of protein. In addition, it is one of the most completely digestible foods so that it can be included in almost all diets.

The six-page "Guide To Nutrition" mentions, for instance, that lean meat can be valuable in convalescent diets. After surgery, meat can aid in restoring blood loss and repairing body tissue. Lean meat is also an important meat.

The guide contains charts which show the comparative nutritive values of various kinds of fresh and processed meat.

Another six-page folder "How To Buy . . . To Cook Beef" pictures the different cuts of beef and explains how they should be cooked. For instance, tender cuts, such as sirloin steak, wing steak roast and rolled rib roast can be roasted or broiled. Medium tender cuts (blade roast, square end rump roast, round steak, etc.) can be prepared in the same way or like less tender cuts which need braising or stewing. Among the less tender cuts are flank steak, brisket, short ribs and round bone shoulder roast.

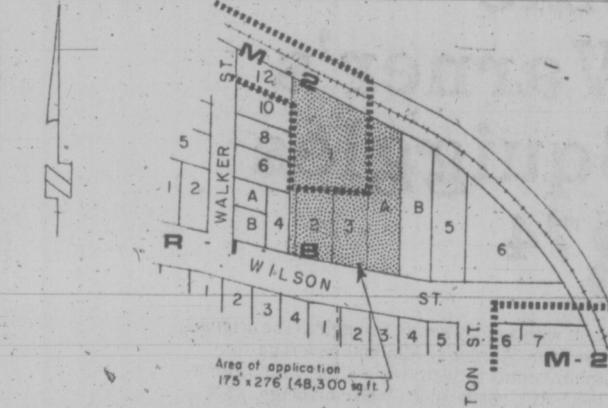

The folder also discusses government inspection and grading of meat. For either publication contact Home Economics Department, Canada Packers Kitchens, 95 St. Clair Avenue W., Toronto, Ontario.

Mystery Link in Diet, Stones

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

BY DR. JEAN MAYER and DR. JOHANNA DWYER

Q. Could you please discuss the relationship between diet and the formation of kidney and bladder stones?

A. The effect of dietary factors on the development of kidney stones remains unclear. It has been observed that a certain type of bladder stone was common among the poor of England and Western Europe during the 18th and 19th centuries and that as the diet improved, the incidence of these stones declined. Today, these stones are common in other parts of the world, particularly in South-East Asia and, especially, among malnourished young children, whose diet consists mostly of rice, is almost devoid of animal protein and is low in phosphate. As in Europe, when the diet is improved the incidence of stones declines.

The guide contains charts which show the comparative nutritive values of various kinds of fresh and processed meat.

Another six-page folder "How To Buy . . . To Cook Beef" pictures the different cuts of beef and explains how they should be cooked. For instance, tender cuts, such as sirloin steak, wing steak roast and rolled rib roast can be roasted or broiled. Medium tender cuts (blade roast, square end rump roast, round steak, etc.) can be prepared in the same way or like less tender cuts which need braising or stewing. Among the less tender cuts are flank steak, brisket, short ribs and round bone shoulder roast.

The guide also discusses government inspection and grading of meat. For either publication contact Home Economics Department, Canada Packers Kitchens, 95 St. Clair Avenue W., Toronto, Ontario.

tant measure in preventing stone formation is increased fluid intake. This produces a dilute urine, reducing the potential for the buildup of stone-forming salts. Usually more than three quarts of fluid a day is recommended. In some cases, the acidity or alkalinity of the urine may be changed; this is usually done with drugs.

Finally, foods that contain the substances or precursors of compounds found in the stones may be restricted, although it must be confessed that there is little evidence to suggest that dietary restriction is effective in stone prevention.

Just which foods should be eliminated will depend on what the stones are found to contain.

Q. I am trying to reconcile using Chinese stir-fry cooking on a cholesterol-lowering diet. Would you tell me whether this is possible?

A. Absolutely. For most North Americans, the word "fried" conjures up an image of heavily breaded chicken, dripping in grease, served with a generous portion of French fried potatoes, also oozing with fat.

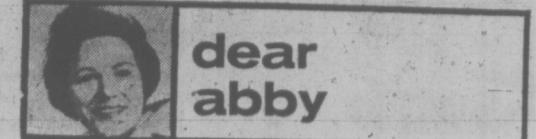

This is far from the truth when it comes to Chinese stir-fry cooking. In the first place, while a restaurant cook may be a bit heavy-handed with the oil, you can prepare a dish that will serve four with less than two tablespoons of oil, chicken without the skin.

Second, stir-fry recipes usually call for lean cuts of skin and white fish. And finally, as traditionally prepared, the amount of meat, chicken or fish is quite small in relation to the volume of vegetables. All of this adds up to dishes low in fat and low in calories.

In fact, a good Chinese cookbook can be an invaluable asset to anyone looking for variety on a cholesterol-lowering diet. If you decide to buy a cookbook (and particularly if you are fortunate enough to have access to an Oriental grocery store), select one that has a section describing how to use the many types of foods with which you may not be familiar. Then, begin to experiment and try new things. It is the variety of tastes and textures and the abundant use of lightly cooked vegetables that make well-prepared Chinese stir-fry dishes the outselling culinary treats they are.

Vasectomy Plan Turns Him Off

DEAR ABBY: My wife just had her fourth child, and we now have two boys and two girls, which are all we want.

My problem is that she wants me to have a vasectomy, but I'm chicken. It's not the pain I'm afraid of; it's just that I'm afraid I'll feel like less of a man just knowing that I won't be able to father any more children.

My wife can't tolerate the pill, and the other methods of birth control turn her off, so it's up to me.

I feel dumb asking this, but should I or shouldn't I? What do other men who've had it say? CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: If you're afraid you'll feel like "less of a man" after a vasectomy, the chances are you WILL, so unless you can overcome that feeling, I wouldn't recommend it.

Ask your wife to talk to her doctor about the new, quick and painless method of sterilization for women known as "laparoscopic tubal cauterization." A tiny incision is made below the navel. The surgeon then inserts a scope, locates both tubes and seals them permanently. The incision is then closed with a small stitch, covered by a Band-Aid. The patient can go home an hour later.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 32-year-old divorcee. No kids, thank heavens. I met a wonderful man. He's 68, but before you say he's too old for me, let me say that he can do everything a 25-year-old man can do, and I'm not just guessing.

He has had two brief marriages and says this is the first time in his life he's ever been in love. I get along fine with his two married daughters, and his grandchildren are crazy about me. He has a pacemaker, but is not a homosexual. Are employers so bigoted and homophobic that they won't hire bachelors on the remote chance that they might be gay? Otherwise, why do they ask this question?

A man's marital status is in no way related to his ability to perform the job. Surely all married men are not ipso facto more competent than single men.

So, what do you advise me to say when I am asked that question? — IRATE BACHELOR.

DEAR BACHELOR: Answer truthfully. It's possible that you are rejected for another reason. (Could it be that when you're questioned about your marital status your obvious annoyance comes through unattractively?)

DENNIS THE MENACE

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It has been pointed out in this column that borderline penalty doubles by a defender-to-be are usually losing bids, for they tend to guide declarer to the winning line of play. An example can be observed in today's deal, which was played in a rubber-bridge game.

Opening lead: Seven of ♦.

Dummy's nine of diamonds was played on the opening lead, East taking the trick with his queen. The ace of diamonds was then cashed, after which a third diamond was led. South ruffed with the ace as West discarded a club. Based on East's double, South came to the correct conclusion, namely that East possessed the spade ace. Therefore, to lead a spade towards dummy's king almost surely would result in two spade tricks — and the contract — being lost. So declarer, after much thought, decided to adopt a long-shot line of play, the rationale being that a little hope was better than no hope.

The king of trumps was led to trick four, South noting the fall of East's eight-spot. The jack of trumps was played next and overtaken with the board's queen. When East followed suit with the nine of trumps, dummy's seven of trumps became created as a vitally needed extra entry to the North hand.

A small club was led next, with South finessing his jack successfully. The ace of clubs was then cashed, after which the four of trumps was led to the board's seven-spot, picking up West's last trump en route. The two high diamonds and the king of clubs provided resting places for three of South's spades, and the doubled contract was fulfilled.

Without the double, South undoubtedly would have led towards the king of spades. But with the spade ace being marked as reposing in the East hand, the chance that the 9-8 of trumps was a doubleton, and that the club queen was in the East hand, had to be played for. So, with luck and skill combining, the contract was brought home.

THE NAME YOU KNOW!

Established lawns need a regular feeding program to maintain a healthy, vigorous turf, but we have to admit that most of us home gardeners approach lawn care in a hit-and-miss manner.

Not until some trouble is definitely apparent do we enquire if a bit of fertilizer might solve the problem, or maybe a toxic spray would be better.

A lot of lawn troubles that throw the owner into a small panic would never occur in a turf that was getting the amount of food that should be returned to the soil from which it was taken.

This removes from the grass area a certain amount of food that should naturally be returned to the soil from which it was taken.

We also water the lawn freely in summer to keep it green. As this water sinks into the subsoil it takes with it quantities of dissolved available plant food, carrying it beyond the reach of the grass roots.

In fall, winter and spring, natural rainfall continues the job.

With this rate of loss it is reasonable to expect the lawn to become hungry and sick unless replacements are maintained at a level which slightly exceeds the losses.

Obviously, a large application of fertilizer at one time is just pure waste, since the grass plants can only use so much and the rest is lost in soil water.

Little-and-often is the rule that saves plant food and makes for a better lawn.

Books on turf management tell us how to work out the ratio of how much food is supplied and the water used to wash it to the roots, but few home gardeners are interested in the mathematical angle.

Nor is it necessary if the little-and-often rule is remembered.

Every authority on lawn care seems to have different advice to offer.

This is reasonable considering the number of lawn grasses that thrive in different locations, the many types of soil, and the wide variation of climates in which lawns are grown.

Each authority advises for the conditions with which he is most familiar.

Locally our lawns continue to make steady growth throughout the fall, needing care and attention, and often a cut on Christmas or New Year's Day.

To continue growth this late in the season without becoming starved, a feeding of complete lawn fertilizer compounded for West Coast conditions is given at the beginning of September.

Recommended mixes for our soils and climatic conditions are 10-4-7 (Uplands Special) or 10-6-4 (Green Valley), applied over the Labor Day weekend; the same time as amateurs seed new lawns. The amounts to apply are printed on the containers.

September feeding of the lawn should not be looked upon as an expense. It is a sound investment that pays dividends.

LIGHTS OF CHRISTMAS PAST twinkled around Santa, rockets, Rudolf, the red-nosed reindeer and windmills at the house at 1378 Hillside, owned by Andrew Carrie, a perpetual prize winner in the annual Jaycee lighting contest. But no more. Carrie, after years of delighting Victorians with his artistry, has moved to 3612 Crestview and the 24-year-old house originally built by policeman

Stan Holmes, is being moved to MacKenzie Avenue, to make room for a 50-unit condominium on Hillside. Carrie says he can't count the number of prizes he won in the contests, but he still has three silver flower stands and three rose "bowls." The new house at Crestview doesn't have the same potential for lights, he says, "but maybe there'll be a few."

Rights Body Confirms Irish Torture Reports

LONDON (AP) — British troops and police tortured suspected Irish Republican Army (IRA) members in Northern Ireland over a three-month period in late 1971, the European Commission on Human Rights declared today.

The commission issued a 600-page report charging that the British government was guilty of permitting "systematic torture" between August and October, 1971. (The report was leaked to the press last week.)

A British government spokesman said: "We are not questioning the commission's report. We do not deny that unpleasant things happened. But it is a thing of the past."

"We no longer use the interrogation techniques described in the report ... but at the time it was a question of policy."

The commission report said British interrogators used five techniques on some suspects after troops and police rounded up almost 350 men in pre-dawn swoops Aug. 9, 1971. The techniques were:

— Depriving detainees of sleep.

— Depriving them of food and water "other than one round of bread and one pint of water at six-hourly intervals."

— Forcing detainees to stand against a wall, legs apart and hands raised against the wall, for long periods.

— Subjecting them to "white noise," a continuous high-pitched noise calculated to isolate them from communication."

— Depriving detainees of sleep.

— Depriving them of food and water "other than one round of bread and one pint of water at six-hourly intervals."

— Forcing detainees to stand against a wall, legs apart and hands raised against the wall, for long periods.

Victim Identified

RCMP today released the name of a 28-year-old Nanaimo man who died in a single-car crash in Nanaimo early Wednesday.

He was John William Sanderson.

Police said Sanderson was the lone occupant of a car that smashed into a power pole at the intersection of Cedar Road and Cranberry at 12:20 a.m.

He was one of two men who died in separate mishaps on Vancouver Island Wednesday.

The other was Robert William Olafson, 44, of Lake Cowichan.

Olafson, a logger, employed by Western Forest Industries was killed instantly when struck by a falling tree near the Gordon River logging camp.

Police indicated there would be inquiries in connection with both deaths.

Korean Warnings Admitted by U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — North Korean guards twice warned a United Nations command team against cutting the celebrated poplar tree in the Korean demilitarized zone. U.S. administration officials wednesday.

The first warning was 12 days before U.S. officers were killed near the tree, and the second came moments before the fatal attack.

In a lengthy session that made public many new details of the circumstances surrounding the Aug. 18 killings, U.S. state and defense department officials maintained that the North Korean assault appeared to have been premeditated.

Early Cancer Warning?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two scientists say they inadvertently have found a substance in the blood of cancer patients that may provide an early warning system for the disease.

Doctors J. C. Morrison and E. T. Bucovaz of the University of Tennessee said Wednesday that tests of 4,200 people showed the system was nearly 90 per cent accurate in identifying whether patients had cancer.

They told a news conference at the American Chemical Society national meeting that if it proves itself in further studies, the blood test might be part of routine yearly physical examinations in three years.

Morrison stressed that it was unknown how early in the development of a tumor a positive result would show up in the test.

He also said the test is a general one that may indicate cancer is present, but will not tell doctors where.

Bucovaz said the two doctors began their research looking at the structure of yeast cells. In trying to find a protein molecule in the cells, they mixed human blood to see if the molecule they were looking for would combine with a different protein in the blood.

By chance, Bucovaz said, the blood they were using came from a cancer patient, and they found that a protein in the blood did latch on to the yeast protein.

Hepatitis Treated By Protein

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors say they are successfully using a natural human protein to treat long-time carriers of hepatitis — persons whose disease until now had no cure.

The researchers say they may be on the brink of a remedy for this form of hepatitis. They caution, however, that it is too soon to tell whether their method will work for all patients.

Authorities say they hope the discovery will help in the development of a treatment for other diseases spread by viruses, such as the common cold.

A report on the work, conducted by a team at Stanford University, appears in the current issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors are using interferon, one of the body's natural protections against illness, to wipe out the hepatitis virus in patients who ordinarily would carry the disease for life. The interferon they used was derived from human white blood cells.

The precise way in which the treatment works is unknown.

Although most people recover from hepatitis naturally after a few weeks of rest, about 10 per cent continue to carry the virus in their blood indefinitely. These people can infect others with the disease.

Shopping Centre Approved

PORT ALBERNI — The owner of the Franklin River restaurant has been given first zoning approval by the Alberni-Clayoquot Region Board to build a small shopping centre on the Bamfield Road.

Robert Pettigrew, owner of the halfway Coffee Shop at MacMillan Bloedel's Franklin River camp, will locate his centre, consisting of a service station, general store, restaurant, bank and post office, about half-a-mile from the camp.

Pettigrew has obtained the permission of the B.C. Forest Service and MacMillan Bloedel to proceed with construction of the new buildings, and needs only the rezoning process to complete his plans.

The Franklin River camp has grown considerably since it was established at its present site in 1946, and the company has indicated it will continue to be a main base of operation in the area on a long-term basis.

It has had its own elementary school since 1955, and a community firehall and swimming pool since 1974.

Tsawout Chief Dead at 73

RICHARD HARRY, hereditary chief of the East Saanich Tsawout band, died Wednesday in Rest Haven Hospital, Sidney, following a brief illness. He was 73.

He was well-known in lacrosse and baseball circles and organized many salmon barbecues at social functions.

He is survived by three daughters, Georgina, Grace and Agnes, and a son, Vernon.

Funeral services are to be announced.

AIRPORT VOTE OFF

the land area suggested by the federal transport department as appropriate for construction of an airport lies outside the boundaries of the city.

Some $125,000 had been set aside in this year's city budget for the purpose, but a recommendation by the council-airport committee that a land package of some 53 acres at the suggested site be purchased for just over $141,000, was defeated at a July council meeting.

At the same time, city Ald. George McKnight moved that the matter be referred to the regional district (Alberni-Clayoquot), of which he is chairman, since he argued the airport was to service the entire area and the property in question was outside municipal jurisdiction.

Juvenile Crime Wave Swamping B.C.

A MILLION-DOLLAR PROBLEM

VANCOUVER (CP) — What should be done with juvenile offenders?

That is the question facing the criminal justice system in British Columbia, hit by a mushrooming juvenile crime wave that has swamped the juvenile justice system in the province.

A Nanaimo provincial court judge, the latest in a long line of critics of the province's methods of dealing with youthful law-breakers, ordered the B.C. superintendent of child welfare, Victor Belknap, to pay a $250 fine and make restitution for crimes committed by a 14-year-old boy earlier placed in the department's charge.

Judge Stanley Wardill said he was "fed up" with juvenile problems in the province.

The evidence that the juvenile delinquency problem in the province, especially in the metropolitan Vancouver area, has grown beyond the capacity of the justice system is conclusive.

A 12-year-old who gunned down a Woodward's store employee during the course of a robbery attempt received less than a year in a treatment facility.

A gang of youths who went on an arson rampage causing more than $500,000 damage received probation.

A 15-year-old who injured an old woman so severely she died soon after during a purse-snatching attempt also received probation.

Probation officer Dave Buckley says a court appearance is enough to cure many juvenile offenders of any criminal leanings.

But others, he said, can only be reformed through lengthy treatment at some type of juvenile centre.

When a juvenile — a person under 17 — is arrested for a crime, he cannot be held in custody unless the crime is a very serious one.

The only secure jail for juveniles in the Vancouver area is at Willingdon, in Burnaby.

It has room for about 30 residents and is a remand centre — where youths are sent to await trial.

Juveniles cannot be sentenced there except officially by delaying their trials and remanding them there repeatedly.

Under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, said former crown juvenile prosecutor Colin Sweeney, nothing can happen to most youthful offenders "except the inconvenience of a court appearance."

For most, that court appearance is enough, but those who commit crimes again and again are made wards of the superintendent of child welfare, as the 13-year-old in the Nanaimo case.

According to Buckley, the probation officer, and juvenile lawyer Harvey Field, there are about 50 of this kind of hard-core delinquents in the Vancouver area.

Police say there are up to 200.

When a child is made a ward, authorities have several choices of where he can be sent, including foster homes, group homes and treatment centres, but none of these are secure — a place where offenders cannot escape. Residents can walk away from them at any time, and many do.

Charles Goyer, a lawyer and former probation officer, said the juvenile justice system is "the one single worst area of the justice system."

"The goals they are trying to achieve are breaking down," he said.

"There is no way the system controls the kids, there is no way it punishes the kids or gives them any conception of what is wrong."

Jack Harris, a lawyer who was a juvenile prosecutor for six months, said, "with regard to your hardcore juveniles who intend to commit one crime after another," the justice system "is a waste of time."

He said there are some steps for crime prevention within the Juvenile Delinquents Act, but the act is not used enough.

"Sure you can only fine a juvenile $25, but you can order restitution of $300."

The final step for juvenile offenders is raising them to adult court to stand trial.

But that step can only be taken with the consent of the attorney-general's department and that consent has been given only once, in January, 1975, in the past two years.

The effect of leaving hardcore juveniles on the street is devastating.

"Juvenile crime in this province is costing us millions of dollars each year," said one senior police officer.

Judge Harold Keenleyside of Surrey, who headed a three-member commission to set up proper juvenile facilities which was later scrapped by the Social Credit government, said a solution to the problem lies solely with politicians.

"We (judges) are desperately trying to find resources for a problem and we can't produce the resources," Judge Keenleyside said.

"We've been faced with a problem without solutions."

"The whole question is more than legal — it's a social problem. If a run-away isn't going to stay, we have no place to put him. I think you could say we're at our wits' end."

Quake Jolts City

A brief dish-rattling earthquake hit the Victoria area at 6:36 a.m. today; the third major local tremor in 10 months.

It registered about 4.0 on the Richter scale and awakened thousands, but no damage was reported.

Centre of the quake was in the Strait of Juan de Fuca at Port Townsend, 30 miles east of Port Angeles.

It lasted about five seconds. It began with a slight trembling motion that slowly grew and then shook hard for two seconds before quickly subsiding.

Some residents reported cats and other animals scurried for cover about 15 seconds before the quake began. Dishes rattled and houses shook but no structural damage was reported.

The quake was the third in a series of local corrections, according to Bill Milne, seismologist with the earth physics branch of the federal department of energy, mines and resources.

"It was less severe than the other two. There are a number of corrections behind the main earthquake zone which is in the Pacific Ocean about 275 miles west of Victoria."

Milne said earthquakes are almost a daily occurrence along the quake zone, which runs northwards and is 100 miles west of Port Hardy at the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

The quake zone tremors are seldom felt in Victoria because they are so far out to sea and at least 6,000 feet down.

However, they produce occasional corrections, realignments of the earth, and are felt in Georgia Strait or in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, which was originally thought to be a fault line, but this concept has largely been discarded.

"What we have are corrections behind the quake belt and these corrections are in the waters of the straits."

They seem to occur along the international border between Canada and the U.S. in Georgia Strait. There was a correction in November in Georgia Strait just off the University of B.C. campus. A more severe jolt came May 16 centred on the international boundary near Pender Island.

Today's quake was centred in American waters just off Port Townsend, a small Washington port on the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Unlike California quakes, local jolts tend to be fairly deep in the earth and therefore the shock is less severe. For example the May tremor was 40 feet below the earth's surface and today's quake is believed to be of about the same depth.

Although it was quite mild, the quake was felt over a wide area. It was strong enough to wake people in coastal areas of Washington state and in a wide section of Vancouver Island, including Sooke, the Malahat area and Sidney.

The tremor was followed by phone calls to anyone in authority as residents reported falling pictures, bouncing TV sets and rattling plates—but no major damage.

A major question was when would the next correction come.

"If I knew the answer to that one I would become a very wealthy man," Milne said.

"More corrections will come but we are not certain when."

Reporter Digs Up Ghost Story

By MARTIN WOOLLACOTT
Manchester Guardian

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — When readers of the Ceylon Evening Observer picked up their copies recently they were not surprised to find the lead story devoted to interviews with three housewives who stoutly defended the Bandaranaike government against critics who had claimed a conference of non-aligned nations would force up food prices.

The Observer belongs to a newspaper group more or less controlled by the government and, since food prices are a key political issue here, it was to be expected that its reporters would stress favorable views.

The real revelation came the next morning when the Communist newspaper, Attha (Truth), pointed out gleefully that the Observer's reporter had fabricated the story, at least to the extent of lifting the three names from the obituary column of the morning paper, which happened to be lying on his desk.

The story of the "interview with the corpses" has given rise to much merriment. But it has enraged the government, and the government-controlled Board of Associated Newspapers, which owns the Observer and is one of the three names from the obituary column of the morning paper, which happened to be lying on his desk.

tion were not only staunch supporters of the government on the prices question, but were also dead.

How else could it be explained, Attha added, that the names of the three "typical" housewives appeared prominently at the head of the obituary column in the same morning's issue of the Observer's sister paper, the Ceylon Daily News?

The unfortunate truth was that the Observer's reporter

Times Tennis Finals Set For Saturday

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

After three months of play, and some pretty torrid battles, the stage is all set for Saturday's grand finals of the third annual Victoria Times Public Parks tennis tournament.

All gets under way at 1 p.m. with the junior boys' and girls' singles finals at Henderson Park courts in Oak Bay. They will be followed immediately (about 2 p.m.) with the other three finals — the men's and women's singles and the mixed doubles.

Following the presentation of trophies to winners and runners-up, there will be (at roughly 3 p.m.) a special exhibition doubles match between Ian Brady and Tony Hardy and Ernie Cockayne and Roger Skillings.

Brady, the hard-hitting Australasian-born pro at the Island Indoor Tennis centre in Saanich, is the top-ranked player on Vancouver Island. And Hardy, formerly pro at Vancouver's Arbutus Club, took over officially this week from Ray Aldague as new pro at the Racquet Club of Victoria. Cockayne and Skillings, well-known to local fans, have never been beaten by a combination living on the Island.

Lanky Ed Steele and pretty Peggy Glegg this week became the last two players to reach the singles final.

The six-foot, seven-inch Steele, who plays regularly at the Beacon Hill Park courts, brushed past Gary Mols of the University of Victoria 6-1, 6-1 Tuesday night to make it to the men's final where he will meet John Taylor.

Barbados-born Mrs. Glegg battled past Carolyn Jones 6-4, 6-2 to reach the women's final. She takes on B.C. badminton star Liz-Anne Ogden, winner of this event two years ago.

Pro-Am at Cedar Hill

Defending-champion John Morgan of Uplands and Cowichan professionals Bill Wakeham are the only previous winners in the record entry of 244 set to tee off in the fifth annual CFAZ-Metro Toyota Open golf tournament this weekend at Cedar Hill Golf Club.

The 36-hole provam medal test gets under way at 6:30 a.m. Saturday and concludes Sunday.

Morgan, a touring pro, captured the title last year by beating Bob Beauchemin of Gorge-Vale on the first hole of a playoff and Wakeham took the laurels in 1973.

The two former winners tee off at 2:30 p.m. in a foursome with Langara and Terry Weins and B.C. Open champion Cec Ferguson of Uplands.

Surprise Visit . . . Drug Squad Style

By DERÉK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

It was just a routine drug search.

Tuesday, 9 a.m., Peter MacLean and his wife Robin, both 25, are dozing in bed unaware seven police officers are sifting through their four-room bungalow at 22 Midwood in View Royal.

One group of officers approaches the front door; another the back. At a signal they break through, splintering the frame of one door, knocking the lock off the other.

Guns drawn, they rush into a bedroom and seize the MacLeans by the throat, jab fingers into their mouths, feeling along their gums and under their curled-up tongues.

"Don't swallow," an officer says.

"What?" mumbles Robin, wide-eyed.

The officers release their grip. One stands by the bedroom door while they get dressed.

The rest start searching the house — emptying dresser drawers and closets, overturning boxes, opening cupboards and jars and suitcases, shaking the dirt out of potted plants, looking in old shoes, under carpets, inside the arms of chairs. After one hour and 40 minutes, it's over.

They take some objects — MacLean says he doesn't know what — and leave.

"We'll be back," says an officer going out the door.

Just a routine search, police said later. It happens almost every day somewhere in Greater Victoria.

All an officer needs is reasonable and probable grounds that a drug offence is being committed for him to burst into any home any time — his authority, an open warrant called a writ of assistance.

"It gives us enormous power," says one drug officer. "But we have to rely on the integrity and good judgment of the officers."

The MacLeans can understand police have to do certain things in drug investigations, like breaking in unannounced and grabbing people by the throat to make sure drugs aren't swallowed or disposed of in some other way. They can accept too the fact there have to be searches.

What they can't understand is if the police find nothing, if no charges are laid, if the person being searched is innocent of any wrong-doing, then why should the person have to clean up the mess and pay for damages done?

They feel it's wrong, and today or Friday intend to file a claim with the RCMP for compensation to cover the cost of repairing the doors (about $100) and replacing a figurine that was broken in the search.

The MacLeans say police raided their place five weeks ago while they were both out, caused some damage then and left without finding anything.

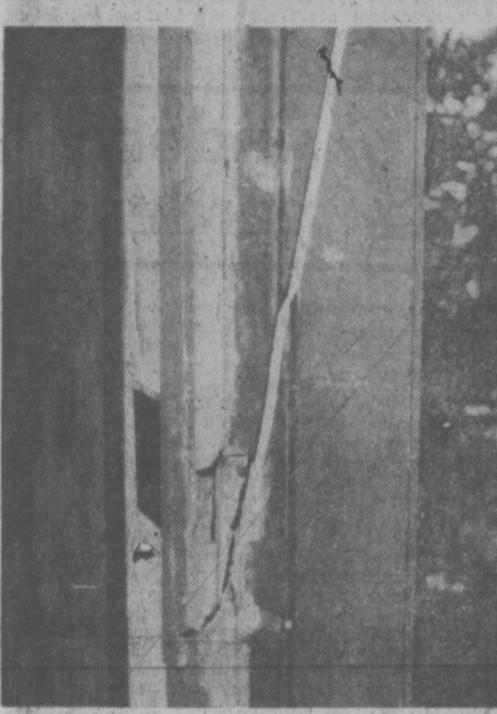

Peter who is unemployed and admits he has a lengthy record dating back to when he was a juvenile but says he's now trying to mend his ways, is fed up with "police harassment."

He says he's been beaten up, forced to strip in a public park and had his jacket ripped in recent encounters with police.

A spokesman for the Greater Victoria drug squad said anyone can make a claim for damages but didn't know how many persons actually did.

He said there was no onus on police to clean up a mess created in searching.

If all depends on the officer, he said.

AIB Protest Rallies Slated

Parades, rallies and meetings will be held by union members participating in the one-day work stoppage Oct. 14.

"It's not a demonstration against employers, but against the government," Canadian Labor Congress representative Bill Smalley of Vancouver said today. He said the CLC wants picketing kept to a minimum.

Smalley is in Victoria to help co-ordinate national protest day activities. He told Victoria Labor Council delegates Wednesday one day is enough to impress Prime Minister Trudeau.

"If workers are willing to give up one day's pay, it should make him wonder what the hell they are going to do when they get to the ballot box," Smalley said in response to one delegate.

Jim Walker, president of the city outside workers represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said his members seem to feel the work stoppage should be longer than one day to make a real impression on the government.

Council delegates solidly supported the protest day, with the exception of regional district employees' spokesman Ken Robertson, of CUPE Local 1978. Robertson said his local has not yet discussed participation.

The council formed a committee headed by president John Schibl to co-ordinate labor activities on protest day.

Smalley said the council committee will work with committees from local unions to decide what form the protest will take here.

A special meeting will be held Sept. 15 to complete plans and delegates from non-affiliates of the council will be invited.

Smalley said there has been no major B.C.-wide demonstration planned at the legislature and protest activities are designed to stay at the local level.

Although in most cases rank and file union members haven't had a chance to vote on participation in the stoppage, Smalley said the one-day protest is "really already on its way."

Langholt said the ruling was "pretty exciting" one for community representatives, but at the CUFA meeting following the court hearing it was agreed they should not expand their time and energy over a whole month of registration.

"It seems wiser to concentrate on one intensive week," he added.

Joyce Heynsbroek, president of the Fernwood Community Association, said the campaign may include setting up booths at shopping centres where voters can be registered.

She said she views the court ruling as something of a personal "delayed victory," because several years ago when she was president of the Capital Region Tenants' Association her requests for bulk supplies of voter forms were "repeatedly" refused by the city.

Waller had earlier refused the association's request for a bulk supply of forms, and was supported in his stand by city council.

DOCTORS WERE WORRIED

Tighter Rules For Abortions

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospitals have adopted tighter routines for approving abortions, requiring patients to sign a statement and their doctors to answer more questions.

Dr. Ray LeHuquet, medical director at Jubilee, said the changes reflect the uneasiness felt by some doctors, particularly those directly involved, that abortion committees have been virtually rubber-stamping applications.

There were 403 applications

considered by the committee at Jubilee last year and 402 approved. At Victoria General, the committee reviewed 621 applications and approved 613.

The number of abortions performed at Victoria's two general hospitals totalled 955 last year, about one for every three live births.

In addition to the tighter requirements for abortion applications, doctors and both hospital boards have jointly adopted slightly revamped guidelines for approving abortions.

The Criminal Code makes a therapeutic abortion lawful where a hospital's abortion committee (composed of doctors who do not do the operation) certifies it believes continuation of the pregnancy would or would be likely to endanger the life or health of the woman.

Local practice has been for abortion committees to make their decision simply on a letter from the patient's doctor.

Under the new format the patient becomes directly involved in the application which comes before the abortion committee. She must sign a statement which asks for the abortion because it will or may have "an adverse effect on my health."

The statement also notes that her doctor has explained her decision may affect her health or future fertility and arrangements have been made to give her contraceptive advice.

Instead of a letter, the patient's doctor must now complete a standard application for the abortion committee which details the patient's medical and some social history.

Among questions to be answered: does the father of the child wish the patient to have an abortion?

Dr. D. C. Carlow, medical director at Victoria General, said both hospitals operate with what is in effect a single abortion committee which makes its decisions by majority vote.

About 95 per cent of abortions are approved on grounds the mental upset of continuing the pregnancy would endanger her health, he said.

In most cases the operation is done before the fetus is 10 weeks old and the patient is in and out of hospital the same day.

The new format and revised guidelines follow study of the issue by a committee of five doctors and examination of practices at other hospitals.

The guidelines suggest applications may be approved when the patient strongly desires an abortion and any factor is present which poses a significant threat to her life or health.

Where the threat is to mental health, psychiatric symptoms prior to and following diagnosis of pregnancy should be specified.

Approval cannot be granted solely at the request of the patient.

Troller Demolished

A 36-foot Sooke troller is a write-off after piling up on the rocks at Estevan Point today.

Owner Kenneth Williamson, who scrambled ashore, radioed a distress message at 5:50 a.m. to say his Belle Island Sound had hit rocks.

A Pacific Rescue Co-ordinate Centre spokesman said Williamson made it safely to shore and, presumably, climbed up to the Estevan Point lighthouse.

FRASER Skeptical on Bricks

Painted steel sheets are being placed over the brickwork at the Victoria Law Courts on Burdett because matching bricks could not be found for the two new storeys.

Public Works Minister Alex Fraser said today.

However, Fraser indicated he did not necessarily go along with that explanation.

The reason I was given was that they couldn't match the bricks. That's just the reason I was given, I'm not sure I agree with it.

The court house is having two floors added to the three-storey building and the steel sheeting covering most of two sides of the building is expected to be extended so that all the old brickwork is covered.

Told that a local masonry contractor has said the bricks could be easily matched any where in Western Canada, Fraser said: "I'm not surprised to hear that."

They are producing about 30 million board feet of lumber per month and only 22 million board feet is moving out in ships. The remainder piles up on the docks and any other storage space available.

And the lumber moving out is not being sold. It is going to the eastern U.S. for stockpiling until market conditions improve. Some of it is also going to the United Kingdom, again for stockpiling.

These market conditions are general for all companies in British Columbia."

Purdy said troubles in the forest industry are much more severe than most people think because they see ships being loaded and think all is well.

"In fact, very little lumber is being sold."

This means unemployment is certain to increase over the next few months and should hit its highest level in January or early February.

Ironically, there are hundreds of jobs available in Alberta, where unemployment continues to be at about the three per cent level.

"There has been very little interest in the Alberta jobs so far," he said.

Adding to the local woes is the construction dispute, with another lockout-strike situation scheduled to begin Tuesday morning.

The tourist industry continues to be in a slump but retail sales are holding fairly well and in fact are slightly higher than last August. Appliances, household accessories and ladies' fashions were selling well but furniture sales were slower.

The figures do not include the back-to-school sales spurt which is just beginning. With school not opening until Sept. 7, the going-back sales were delayed until early September instead of late August.

The employment level in the Yarrow shipyard has fallen to 310 from a 1976 high of 900 with only three repair boats on the books. The Oakland Industries fish cannery is employing 130 and has not needed a night shift or overtime, unlike past years.

In most cases the operation is done before the fetus is 10 weeks old and the patient is in and out of hospital the same day.

The new format and revised guidelines follow study of the issue by a committee of five doctors and examination of practices at other hospitals.

The guidelines suggest applications may be approved when the patient strongly desires an abortion and any factor is present which poses a significant threat to her life or health.

Where the threat is to mental health, psychiatric symptoms prior to and following diagnosis of pregnancy should be specified.

Approval cannot be granted solely at the request of the patient.

"We're bucking the big multinational shipping interests."

Nish said he has seen skiffs plowed under and known of at least one fisherman who has been drowned through such incidents.

"In fog they should reduce speed but they don't. They could go right over a small fishing vessel and it wouldn't even register on the hull of the merchant ship."

"A few years ago the Daisy B disappeared and seven men were lost. She was last reported passing Victoria on her way out to the strait. We're all convinced she was run over."

A high-ranking ministry of transport official in Vancouver shares Nish's conviction that the element of danger will remain until mandatory monitoring of commercial vessels is enforced.

Capt. Dave Johns, regional superintendent of vessel traffic management systems, said the voluntary reporting system now in operation "only has a marginal effect."

The MoT and the U.S. Coast Guard have been planning an international mandatory monitoring system since 1973 and the voluntary reporting has been in effect since March 1975.
